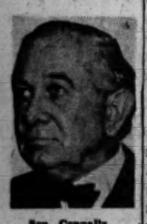
SENATE BALKS AT 'STOOGES' TO AID STETTINIUS

New Dealers Open Heated Debate.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Democrats rebelled in the senate today against what they termed Harry Hopkins' dictation of the reorganization of the state department.



Sen. Connally.

They raged furiously against Harry Hopkins and the New Deal, and cast doubts on President Roosevelt's intention of adhering to his pledges of the Atlantic Charter.

Then they refused to railroad thru the confirmation of Mr. Roosevelt's nominations for four top flight state department jobs, with the support of Republicans their oratory had enlisted. The bi-partisan forces gave a stunning blow to the foreign relations committee, which had urged the haste, by sending back to it the nominations with a mandate to question the nominees before submitting their names again.

Connally Protests Action.

The nominations were sent back to the committee by a vote of 37 to

27 after snowy haired Chairman Connally [D., Tex.], leading advocate of New Deal policies, had protested:

"I do not know of any committee that has ever been told by the senate, 'We are going to send these back to you and we are going to tell you in detail what to do.'"

In the heat of the argument, Connally conceded President Roosevelt will dominate the nation's foreign policy, no matter who the state department executives may be.

Republicans sat back in seeming wonder as the Democrats themselves hurled such charges against New Deal institutions and personalities as have rarely been heard in the senate. Not a Republican raised his voice against the nominees—Joseph C. Grew for undersecretary of state, and William L. Clayton, Archibald MacLeish, and Nelson Rockefeller for assistant secretaries of state.

Danaher Backs Grew.

In fact Sen. Danaher [R., Conn.] urged confirmation of Grew on the ground that, as ambassador to Japan, Grew warned the country and the department for 11 months against the impending war with Japan.

"It would be a novelty," Danaher

Canal Survey Ordered for Airport Road

BY ROBERT HOWARD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 6.—Gov. Green today instructed state highway officials to start an immediate survey of the abandoned Illinois and Michigan canal as the site for a superhighway across Chicago's southwest side. Such an expressway not only would provide easy access to Chicago airport, but would link up with U. S. 66, the principal highway into downstate Illinois.

"This route may afford the cheapest and quickest means of constructing a highway that would serve not only the people of Chicago but of all Illinois," the governor said.

Built Before Railroads.

Thus the canal, which dates from the pre-railroad era and which was made obsolete by the paralleling Illinois deep waterway, would be restored in converted form as a major link in Chicagoland's traffic system. The projected canal expressway has been approved by a long list of officials—federal, state, and local. Action to further the project was taken in congress this week.

It would be the most convenient as well as the fastest and safest motor route to and from most of the downstate cities. Equally vital, it would be of prime importance in making Chicago the air transport center of the middle west.

"If Chicago is going to thrive and keep its position as one of the world's leading cities, it must not lag as an air center," Gov. Green said. "The I. & M. super-highway would give the loop area its badly needed connection with the municipal airport. Wherever the airport is located, Chicago must have quick access to it, and the state administration will do its part to make it possible."

Kelly Backs Present Site.

Mayor Kelly has committed the city to further development of Chicago airport, which is at 63d st. and Cicero av. The city expects to keep the airport a few more years, if not permanently, depending on future progress in aviation. Should the Douglas airport at Park Ridge become Chicago's main aviation terminal, engineers say that new routes would be needed there. In any event, the present airport always would be used, and the canal project would make it more accessible.

Air line limousines now buck surface traffic current along Archer av. Running time to the loop would be reduced 50 per cent by using the

For five months Guamoa Sepeda, 15, Negro, of 1319 W. 110th pl., successfully masqueraded at Fort McClellan, Ala., as Pvt. Jesse Motley, 25, also Negro, of 5608 South Park way.

Last July 29 Guamoa, resplendent in a militia man's uniform, visited Fort Sheridan on a pass. He encountered Pvt. Motley who, eyeing the uniform, asked Guamoa when he was going overseas.

Motley Suggests a Way.

Motley assured Guamoa that all he would have to do would be to exchange uniforms, take Motley's identification discs, and answer to Motley's name at roll call.

Guamoa gleefully consented. Motley left Fort Sheridan on Guamoa's pass and in his uniform. Guamoa went to Fort McClellan.

There he turned out to be a better soldier than Motley, but the sins of the latter plagued him.

There was, for instance, the matter of syphilis treatment which Motley had been taking. Guamoa had to take 20 shots in five months.

Girl Friend Gets News.

Then there was the $16 monthly pay deduction to pay Motley's fine for being AWOL. And there was the $22 allotment for Motley's mother.

As the time neared for overseas service, Guamoa wrote the good news to a girl friend in Chicago. She showed the letter to Guamoa's mother, who notified military police. Guamoa, en route to a port of embarkation, was seized when he reached Chicago yesterday.

"Doggone," he exclaimed. "Why didn't I keep my mouth shut?" Motley, also arrested, concurred.

Atlanta Felons Reveal Terms of Surrender

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 6 [Special].—Twenty-five convicts, who have held four guards as hostages during a two day mutiny at Atlanta federal penitentiary, agreed tonight to surrender if their grievances are given local newspaper publicity tomorrow morning.

Morgan Blake.

The rebels, many classified as psychopathic cases, have held control of a four story building in the prison grounds since last Monday when they barricaded themselves there in protest over their incarceration with convicted German saboteurs and spies. Since then they have successfully held authorities at bay and repulsed all pleas to give up.

Talk to Columnist.

Late today, however, they asked to speak with Morgan Blake, columnist of the Atlanta Journal and church worker who has frequently addressed the prison inmates. Summoned to the prison, he talked with the insubordinates thru a window for 45 minutes, pleading with them to surrender and liberate their hostages.

The convicts agreed to yield only if Blake ran a story in his newspaper relating their grievances. They said an early edition of tomorrow's paper must be shown to them by Blake and, if it met their approval, they would free the guards and come out. Blake said he would comply with the convicts' request.

In the belief the men will surrender in the morning, Warden Joseph W. Sanford sent food in to them for the first time.

Feared for Guards.

Altho officials previously denied reports the convicts had threatened the lives of the hostages, Sanford indicated that fear for the guards' safety was the reason for the two days of cautious maneuvering.

The warden said he didn't know whether the rebellious felons are armed, but it was reported they have knives and clubs.

In disclosing that some of the insubordinates are mental defectives, the warden revealed the name of one of the 25. He said one of the ring leaders is Jack Winn, 28, described as a "constitutional psychopath."

Prison officials disclosed tonight that in addition to the 25 insubordinate convicts and their four hostages, 81 other prisoners are locked in the building.

TRIBUNE WRITER HEARS FROM AN OLD SUBSCRIBER

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY NEAR THE GERMAN BORDER, Dec. 6.—An infantryman of the 26th division today approached Andy Tully, Boston Traveler correspondent, and asked whether any news men around were from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Tully said "yes," but not in the immediate vicinity. The infantryman asked Tully to hand his name to a Tribune man for use.

The soldier gave his name and said he was from Paw Paw, Mich. Tully said, "But you're not from Chicago. I don't know whether the Trib will use it." The soldier replied, "My family has taken THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for many years, and THE TRIBUNE will use the name of any one who's been a constant subscriber. Ask the Trib man if I'm not right."

So Tully did, and here's the name: Corp. Russell H. Price, Paw Paw, Mich.

Sell Congress Hotel; Price Is $1,250,000

BY AL CHASE.

The Congress hotel was sold by the Reconstruction Finance corporation to a Chicago syndicate for $1,250,000, it was announced yesterday by Alexander T. Spare, attorney for the buyers. Details of the sale contract were not made public, but RFC will retain a mortgage on the property, it was said. It will be operated as the Congress Hotel and Annex, Inc.

The new owners expect to take possession in about 30 days and contemplate reopening the hotel about June 1, 1945.

Approximately one million dollars will be spent in modernizing the property, Spare said. This will include redecorating and refurnishing all of the 937 rooms. The Glass Hat, pre-war night club at the Michigan-

The Congress hotel.

Congress corner, will be reopened, as will other dining rooms. Peacock Alley, famous corridor parallel with Michigan av., will be restored, it was said.

Principal stockholder in the purchasing group is Robert S. Levy of Chicago, who owns the Hollenden hotel in Cleveland and other hotel properties, Spare said.

The north part of the hotel is being used by the Chicago Service Men's center in connection with operations in the old Auditorium hotel across Congress st. In appreciation of Mayor and Mrs. Edward J. Kelly's work with the center, the new owners have extended the use of space by the center until next June.

At the time the army leased the hotel, the RFC's investment in the property totaled $2,350,000, including an $800,000 loan on which it foreclosed, and subsequent expenditures for improvements.

SUPER FORTS HIT MANCHURIA FACTORY AREA

Several Shot Down, Japs Assert.

A brief 20th air force bulletin said a large task force of B-29's of the 20th bomber command "continued the campaign against Japanese war production with a daylight attack today against important industrial objectives in Japanese dominated Manchuria."

Gen. Arnold, commanding general of the 20th air force, in his announcement said further details will be announced later.

[A Japanese broadcast recorded by the federal communications commission said the Super Forts hit the southern sector of Manchuria. Tokyo said the raiders struck between 10 and 10:30 a. m. today [Thursday].

["Imperial air forces intercepted the attacking enemy planes and were able to shoot several out of the sky," the Domei agency claimed.

["One enemy plane was bagged by a bodily-crash attack carried out by a plane attached to the national army of Manchukuo (puppet army in Manchuria)."]

Yanks Gain on Leyte.

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Philippines, Dec. 7 [Thursday]—(AP).—Fighting on Leyte Island in the Philippines is increasing, with the Americans making substantial gains on all fronts, Gen. MacArthur said today.

A Japanese tank attack, in the Ormoc corridor sector where the 10th American army corps is applying pressure, failed to break the Americans' grip.

To the south of Ormoc, Japanese supply port on the island's west coast, the Americans of the 24th corps breached the enemy's line on the Palanas river and advanced to a point south of Balogo on the coast and Kang Dagit village inland.

"The enemy's line of reënforcements by water thru Ormoc bay has been cut by our naval and air forces," MacArthur said, and "with the increasing pressure of our ground troops the enemy's situation must be regarded as serious."

Three Freighters Sunk.

MacArthur's bulletin told of allied air thrusts against Japanese installations, air fields, and shipping from the Manila area on the north to the north coast of New Guinea.

Three 1,000 ton enemy freighters were sunk.

Ten Japanese planes attacked American shipping in Leyte gulf, but Yank fighter planes shot down six of the attackers and anti-aircraft gunners brought down two more.

"We sustained some damage," MacArthur said.

35th Division Advances 10 Miles in 2 Days

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 35TH DIVISION IN SARREGUEMINES, France, Dec. 6.—German SS [elite] troops have virtually withdrawn from this rail and industrial center in the face of a savage onslaught of Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army infantrymen, who are maintaining unrelenting pressure.

Despite unfavorable weather conditions—which improved today—35th doughboys have advanced more than 10 miles since they caught the Germans off balance by a surprise predawn attack at Puttelange two days ago. They pushed so swiftly on the heels of retreating Nazis that the latter failed to man an elaborate system of infantry trenches constructed in the last war style. The Germans also failed to defend, except feebly, several deep anti-tank ditches in the rolling terrain from Puttelange northeastward to Sarreguemines.

Smash Bridges in Retreat.

Late today that portion of Sarreguemines on the west side of the Saar river was virtually cleaned up, the majority of the Germans having retreated across the river before blowing up the bridges yesterday afternoon.

Occupation of Sarreguemines was accomplished last night and today by elements of the 134th infantry, whose regimental commander, Col. Butler B. Miltonberger, North Platte, Neb., recently made headlines in his denunciation of the Nebraska prohibition attempt. The attack was greatly aided during the night when a platoon made a deep penetration and captured an 88 millimeter gun intact, killed six members of the gun crew and held the position.

During the day Sarreguemines was being cleaned up in house to house fighting during which prisoners taken were mostly stragglers or deserters. They included two SS men minus their weapons, who told their captors they remained behind deliberately to surrender.

Illinoisans in Cleanup.

Among the troops cleaning up Sarreguemines were Sgt. James R. Lucas, Morrisonville, Ill., battalion wireman; Pvt. Lawrence F. Wallace of S. Latrobe av., Chicago, and Pvt. Edward H. Leonard, Indianapolis, Ind. Wallace and Leonard were pinned down for seven hours yesterday during the initial entry into the town by direct fire from German 20 mm. ack-ack guns.

Maj. Ray Carroll, Decatur, Ill., regimental operations officer, said that while going into the town artillery fire was heavy. In the center of the town, where the inhabitants seemingly were happy to see the Yanks, a group of infantrymen searched buildings where Germans could be concealed. Capt. Lee White, division press relations officer, a former Chicago advertising man, and Sgt. Dewitt Gilpin, 1824 Lincoln Park West, Chicago, also a press relations man, led a party of newspaper men visiting the area.

The infantrymen shot open a cou-

Mail from Yanks in Japan!

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 6 [Special].—Arrival in the United States of half a ton of mail from American prisoners of the Japanese was disclosed here today by E. W. Meyer, a representative of the International Red Cross.

Meyer said the mail was brought here by a Russian ship which had kept a rendezvous at sea with a Japanese ship Nov. 5.

The Russian ship turned over to the Japanese 2,010 tons of food, clothing, medical supplies, games, and books sent by the American Red Cross for distribution to American soldiers and civilians imprisoned by Japan, Meyer said.

Distribution Began.

Meyer said he has received a cable from the Red Cross delegate in Japan stating that this material, which had been held for nearly a year at Vladivostok, has reached Japan and that its distribution has begun.

The Japanese ship carried, in addition to the American mail, one and one-half tons of Japanese books for distribution under Red Cross auspices to Japanese nationals in internment here, Meyer said. Books and mail were taken aboard the Russian ship which then set out for the United States and recently touched here with the Japanese cargo.

Meyer, who is 31 and a Swiss national, flew here from Washington to supervise the book distribution among Japanese. The books first will undergo censorship inspection.

Ship Met Near Siberia.

Meyer said the two ships met 75 miles at sea off a small Siberian port. This is the first announcement that a Russian ship figured in the transportation of the American supplies to Japan. After being held at Vladivostok for several months, the supplies were moved by the Russians to the Siberian port of Nakhodka and diplomatic negotiations were undertaken to permit a Japanese vessel to call for them there.

The exchange of supplies for war prisoners is the first of its kind in the Pacific. Meyer said the distribution will range from Singapore to Bataan.

TANKS, TROOPS FIGHT LEFTIST ATHENS MOBS

Eyewitness Story by Tribune Writer.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Dec. 6.—British Spitfire fighter planes today strafed left wing Greek mobs on Ardettus hill, near the Athens stadium. For three days they had flown low and once fired warning bursts of gunfire over the heads of demonstrators. No figures were available on casualties.

British tanks and troops went into action against heavily armed Greek guerrilla forces in the city as civil rioting which began four days ago developed into major street fighting.

[Another dispatch quoted Police Chief Evert of Athens as saying that according to "more or less reliable information" forces of the ELAS (National Liberation party militia) and Communists may attempt an "all-out assault" on the city.]

Guard Hotel Approaches.

This story is being written in the Gran Bretagne hotel in central Athens, which has been taken over by the British army and converted into a fortress. As I write, I occasionally hear the blast of hand grenades or the crack of rifle fire in nearby streets.

Helmeted British soldiers carrying tommy guns guard all approaches to the hotel, and every one of the several hundred officers living in the hotel wears sidearms at all times.

With other correspondents I arrived early this afternoon on a plane from Italy.

At the hotel, British officers said we were lucky. Not long before we arrived, guerrillas had been shooting into the police headquarters building just across the street.

Heaviest Fighting Today.

Earlier, when we passed over Athens in a plane it looked peaceful and deserted. But it was an illusion, because the heaviest fighting of these wild four days occurred today. Up to this morning, British forces under Maj. Gen. Ronald Scobie had taken only a small part in Athens' troubles, but today they began a fight to restore order.

Shortly before 11 a. m., a British Sherman tank clattered up to the building which houses headquarters of the left wing Greek National Liberation Front [EAM] where more than a hundred guerrillas had barricaded themselves and were shooting from windows. The tank was followed by units of toughened British air borne troops who took part in the recent liberation of Greece.

The tank crashed thru steel gates protecting the front of the building. In floor to floor and room to room fighting, the British cleared the building and captured more than 80 persons. It was reported a British officer was killed.

Reds Fire on Headquarters.

Others of the most fanatical left wingers barricaded themselves in the modern building which is the headquarters of the Greek Communist party. From the roof of this building, which looks across famous Constitution square, Communists were firing machine guns and rifles into police headquarters just across the square. Other British units raided the building and one adjoining.

A bulletin issued today by Gen. Scobie said there is definite proof a number of German soldiers are fighting as members of the Liberation Front guerrilla units within Athens.

Left wing guerrilla fighters warring against Greek police and British forces apparently do not include the few United States army officers and men here in their hatred. Americans have been directed to wear small American flags on their left sleeves to identify their nationality. Several said tonight that mobs of guerrillas had shouted "Long Live America."

SUPREME COURT GETS FINAL PLEA FOR FREE PRESS

Tribune Argument Heard in Support of AP.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—The Supreme court today took under advisement an appeal in the government's civil anti-trust suit against the Associated Press after completion of oral arguments by attorneys representing THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the department of justice and the AP.

A decision is not expected earlier than January. If the justices differ in their views, announcement of a ruling may be deferred for months.

Justice Jackson has disqualified himself from participation. Thus, a possibility was noted of a 4-4 split among the remaining eight justices which would sustain the ruling of the lower court that the AP's by-laws are in violation of the anti-trust laws by reason of the limitations which they impose on membership.

Justices Ask Questions.

Unusually spirited questioning from the bench marked the hearing. All eight justices participated in the examination of Atty. Howard Ellis, representing THE TRIBUNE; Assistant Atty. Gen. Wendell Berge and Special Assistant Charles B. Rugg; and Atty. John T. Cahill, for the AP.

Atty. Ellis, who spoke first, argued that in the absence of any question of monopolization or of a scheme to lessen competition, a large producer of news reports, news pictures and features may sell them to its customers and agree not to sell such services to any other person in the closely limited territory of the customer. The legality of such agreements has been judiciarily recognized from the early common law to the present time, he told the court, and they have never been outlawed—until this case.

He Explains Assessments.

Ellis explained that an applicant for AP membership, when admitted, must pay to the member in the same field 10 per cent of the assessments which have been paid in that field since the AP was begun in 1900. In Chicago, this sum is $339,000.

Chief Justice Stone asked if the effect of the lower court's decree was to require admission to any one without making this payment. Ellis replied that the decree would prevent any money payment to the member in the field but not to the AP itself if it wished to exact such a payment.

Justice Reed asked why such payments were made to a member by a competing member entering the same field. Ellis noted that the United Press and International News Service, other news agencies, enter into contracts with subscribers whereby a lump sum of money will be paid if they dilute the exclusiveness of news in the territory.

Bonus to Old Client.

"Then the UP, a corporation, gives a bonus in favor of the existing subscriber if it grants a new franchise?" asked Justice Roberts. Ellis answered in the affirmative.

"AP and its members consider that members in the field have built up good will for the AP thru constant use of AP and constant payment of assessments," he told the court, "and that some newcomer who has not gone to the expense and trouble over the years of doing that, should recompense the member in the field for what he has given up."

"Is it fair to say that that was the commercial value of the membership?" asked Justice Reed. Ellis said he believed so. Justice Frankfurter joined the questioning:

"Why is there not a competitive factor between two newspapers in the same category? If it has that value, has built up good will, so that the new rival has to pay some money, why does that not reveal the fact that it does have a competitive value?"

Service to Publisher.

"I think undoubtedly that AP service or UP service or any service has a value to a publisher," replied Ellis.

"Whether the agreement is lawful or not is another question," remarked Justice Frankfurter. "But in effect, the AP is the common name for a lot of independent newspapers. When they agree among one another that none admit a rival in its territory, why is there not some contraction of the competitive factor?"

"There is a contraction of the contractual freedom of the AP," said Ellis. "Looking at this as a partnership——"

"They are not really partners because they don't share the profits of the business," interrupted Justice Frankfurter. "They merely share the facility of getting the news and also in agreeing to keep others out."

Value of Exclusiveness.

"Exclusiveness is the soul of competition between newspapers," remarked Ellis. "Whether it be advice to the lovelorn or comic strips——"

"That raises a question in my mind," said Justice Frankfurter, "whether the arrangement of exclusiveness relative to comic strips has the same status in the law as an arrangement for exclusiveness regarding the use of news."

Justice Black here entered the questioning.

"Suppose," he said, "this were a combination between two shoe manufacturers and they entered into an agreement with each other that they would not let any of their products be sold to any other manufacturer except on such an arrangement as you have here?"

"I don't think there would be a doubt as to its validity," replied Ellis. "However, the territorial restrictions of which I am speaking should have even greater validity in the case of intellectual products than in the case of merely fungible goods, like leather or rubber or anything else."

Distribution Seen as Optional.

"An individual may choose to whom he wishes to distribute or disseminate an intellectual product," remarked Justice Murphy.

"Exactly," said Ellis. "I think that is an additional reason. For the purpose of this discussion I am perfectly willing to treat news dispatches as merely fungible goods and under the ordinary rules laid down by this court in the case of such goods, the defendants should be exonerated. When you add the additional factor that this is an intellectual product, there can be no question about it."

"The defendant has extended the fullest availability of that on which judgment under a democratic society can be given," interjected Justice Frankfurter.

"That is right," said Ellis. "May I add that the lower court ruled out of consideration the effect of these contracts on competition, trade, or anything of that nature, and discussed them from the viewpoint of whether they prevented full illumination.

Value of Edict Questioned.

"It is impossible on a motion for summary judgment to determine whether or not the outlaw of these restraints will produce fuller dissemination of news or not."

Ellis noted that the federal communications commission has passed a regulation permitting broadcasting chains to agree with their outlets to serve but one chain in a community and not to serve another.

"This is the first case we have been able to find, and we cite 26 cases in our brief, in which such agreements have not been sustained," he declared. "In the news industry, exclusiveness is the heart and core of all competition and the normal characteristics or competition between newspapers and between news agencies should be preserved.

"There is one obvious effect if this decision stands. There are three major news agencies, AP, UP and INS. There are three or four others knocking at the door, just about to become major news agencies.

Peril to Exclusiveness.

"The New York Times has a news agency which sells to outside newspapers and grants them this same territorial exclusiveness. If it is held that this exclusiveness must be eliminated, the New York Times would certainly cease selling because it would have to serve its competitors in New York and it will never grow into a major news agency.

"There are others. Reuters is coming into the field and Transradio is knocking at the door. The effect of this decision will be to limit the great news agencies to these three [AP, UP and INS] whereas the condition now among news agency competition is very healthful. That doesn't make for full dissemination of news.

"Suppose the decision applies only to the AP because it is a cooperative, as the government claims. It necessarily means that the AP is put in a detrimental bargaining position, compared with UP and INS., because those two may select their customers and may grant territorial exclusivly whereas AP will be required to serve and to serve on equal terms.

Seen as Discrimination.

"Thus, not only will this decision prevent the growth of other agencies but it may have the effect of hurting AP in connection with purely commercial agencies."

The court's questions consumed so much time that Ellis was prevented from presenting orally THE TRIBUNE'S views on the decision as it would affect freedom of the press. These arguments have been stated at length in a brief which will be before the justices as they consider a ruling.

Special Assistant Atty. Gen. Rugg followed Ellis. He contended that the AP's by-laws curbed full dissemination of news as well as raised barriers which protected competitive advantages to members. Rugg was subjected to a barrage of questions.

"I don't see how you could try a complicated anti-trust suit by summary judgment as was done in this situation," said Justice Douglas. "I have examined your brief carefully but it doesn't help me."

Rugg said he would answer the question "later on." He made the same answer frequently as other justices quizzed him.

Chief Justice Stone asked if it would be a violation of the Sherman anti-trust act for a group of manufacturers, having gathered valuable credit information, to deny access to it to competitors.

"I think it is a question of degree," said Rugg. "Your case probably falls in the all-right group."

When Rugg asserted that the Supreme court, in interpreting the Sherman act, had decided cases of this character upon "a rule of reason," Justice Stone rather tartly interjected, "I would not take it that way."

On the matter of whether the AP could satisfy the New York court decree by "freezing" its membership, Rugg finally gave the court this as his view:

"If they cleaned house, if they admitted everybody who had been improperly excluded, and if they admitted everybody today who wanted admission and who might be excluded on the grounds of competition, then they could freeze their membership and say, 'We are now a closed shop' and that might well not be in violation of the Sherman act."

JUSTICE FRANKFURTER—"I don't follow you at all."

RUGG—"I won't argue with you on that."

JUSTICE ROBERTS—"That negatives everything you said in your argument, it seems to me."

RUGG—"O, no. They are now excluded for the competitive advantage. You and I can start—"

ROBERTS—"If they took in all competitors, so there were no longer a competitor outstanding then they could close their membership?"

Sgt. George Simon, 12229 Gregory st., Blue Island, didn't write his wife, Jewell, 20, that he was about to get a furlough as a reward for 21 months in Africa, Italy, and France. He wanted to surprise her. And Jewell, convinced she wouldn't see George again until the end of the war, joined the WACs without telling him. She wanted to surprise him.

They both succeeded. The sergeant arrived home yesterday just in time to see Jewell take off to start training at Fort Des Moines, Ia. However, it isn't as heartbreaking as it sounds. They had 21 days together in Miami, Fla., where George was sent for reassignment after his return from overseas. It was just that the war department also had a surprise up its sleeve: the second furlough.

Tribune Argument Heard in Support of AP.

different from the position of those who, 10 years ago, were from your viewpoint illegally and improperly excluded?"

RUGG—"I think that there may be exclusions even under the decree or under the amended by-laws in sympathy with the decree for reasons other than competition."

ROBERTS—"The court would have to pass upon it."

RUGG—"Not at all. All the court is striking down is the exclusion for competitive reasons. They can be excluded for political reasons or religious reasons or anything else."

A Look at the Future.

RUGG—"Which is?"

STONE—"He wants to be a competitor."

FRANKFURTER—"In other words, why won't there be future competitors as well as past? Do you agree with that?"

RUGG—"Yes, I agree."

This line was dropped and Rugg went on to say that from 1900 to 1928 only six of 102 applications for AP membership were approved in cases where there was a competing member.

A bit later, Stone posed this question for Rugg:

"Where there is information gathered by mutual arrangement and agreement, and the gathering of that information does not involve an infringement of the Sherman law, does the refusal to turn it over to competitors make it an infringement of the Sherman law?"

News As a 'Commodity.'

Rugg promised an answer to this but reverted to a previous contention that the AP was dealing with news as a commodity, not a commodity such as "designs of women's dresses or sugar or peanuts or beans" but nonetheless "a unique commodity."

"It isn't a commodity at all," interjected Frankfurter.

Rugg insisted "news service is a commodity. What you get over the wire is a commodity. You print it, you use it, you sell it."

Douglas, Frankfurter and Roberts repeatedly challenged this conception of news service.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Berge argued that the lower court decree should be strengthened. He condemned a contract between Canadian Press and AP for mutual exclusive exchange of news.

Refers to Cooper Article.

He referred to an article by Kent Cooper, general manager of the AP, urging world freedom of the press, as being in conflict with this practice.

"Evidently Mr. Cooper has not consulted his counsel," remarked Justice Frankfurter.

Justice Murphy asked Berge if any effort had ever been made to obtain congressional action in connection with the AP's alleged monopoly of news. Berge said he knew of but one instance, the introduction of a bill in 1912 on which no action was taken.

"What I am trying to learn," confessed Justice Stone, "is, if the combined gathering of news is not a violation of the Sherman act, why is the refusal to turn it over to others a violation?"

"The combined refusal to turn it over for the purpose of a competitive advantage is a violation," said Berge.

Denies Public Utility Stand.

Berge said the government was not contending that the distribution of news was a public utility. The lower court decree does not open the AP to all comers, he said, but only forbids the exclusion of competition in certain fields.

Atty. Cahill, in brief rebuttal for the AP, denied the government's contention that the AP was so far superior in the news gathering field that it constituted a monopoly. The lower court clearly and expressly found, he noted, that the AP, UP, and INS were comparable in size, scope, coverage, and efficiency.

Fill Stockings for Yanks

Party Aids Drive

University of Chicago students and faculty members held their traditional English wassail party yesterday at Ida Noyes hall on the Midway. This year the party climaxed the campus drive to fill 1,000 Christmas stockings for service men in Chicago hospitals.

Stockings, filled with edibles and practical gifts, will be distributed by Bundles of America, Inc., which also sends gifts to the men overseas.

The wassail party was sponsored by Ida Noyes council, girl's organization of the university, and was directed by Gwendolyn Schmidt, Whiting, Ind., one of the fall beauty queens. Joan Beckman, Flossmoor, and Natalie Fowler, River Forest, headed the Christmas stocking drive.

RENAULT LEAVES BIG AUTO PLANT TO ITS WORKERS

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The Renault automobile works at Billancourt, a Paris suburb, which was confiscated by the De Gaulle cabinet after the founder's death on Oct. 24, would have become the property of his 40,000 workers under his will, it was revealed tonight.

Renault was arrested on Sept. 23 on a charge of working for Germany and was taken to a hospital, where he died. Renault had the reputation of treating his workers harshly, but at his funeral the largest wreath was inscribed "a tribute from the Billancourt staff."

Renault's will gives the workers entire control without government participation. The present trend in France is toward nationalization of industries under government control.

3 OF ST. LOUIS' 7 BIG THEATERS SHUT BY STRIKE

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 6 (AP).—Three of the city's seven major first run motion picture theaters were dark tonight as union projectionists refused to show films of five distributing companies whose employes are on strike. About 30 neighborhood theaters also were closed.

Center of the controversy were three St. Louis county theaters which each employ one nonunion projectionist. The AFL Motion Picture Operators' union, local 143, has asked these theaters to employ two union projectionists, a practice required by ordinance in St. Louis, and by practice, the union says, in St. Louis county.

HAROLD P. SMITH TO TALK BEFORE UNION LEAGUE

First hand accounts of the vast Pacific war theater from Harold P. Smith, Tribune correspondent home on leave, will be heard by the Union League club at a luncheon today. Smith will be introduced by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE.

The correspondent's last combat landing—he had participated in 10—was on Leyte, in the Philippines. His first Pacific assignment was in the Aleutians, near Alaska. From there he went to the Gilberts, where his first hand account of the capture of Makin atoll ranks with the most stirring correspondence of the war.

Smith was a destroyer man in World War I., and he holds a personal commendation from Josephus Daniels, then secretary of the navy, for heroism in rescuing torpedoed Japanese off Ireland in 1918.

Evanston Captain Enters Reich and Wins a Bottle

U. S. 3D ARMY HDQ., Dec. 6.—The prize of a bottle of whisky and a good cigar, offered by Col. Robert P. Bell, Montclair, N. Hallowell's entry into the reich at 10:30 a. m. Saturday stood up as the winner.

TWO ILLINOISANS RISK ALL IN SKY AND WIN BY SKIN

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Dec. 6.—Risking their lives to save a wounded comrade, two Illinoisans refused to abandon their heavily damaged Marauder bomber and fought a two hour battle for life in the sky. When the plane at last made a successful belly landing at its own airport, it was discovered that one square yard of aluminum fuselage skin was all that had kept the dangling tail from tearing away.

The two Illinoisans, whose feat with the aid of their wounded pilot won acclaim, are Lt. Edwin H. Armstrong, 3064 Cheltenham pl., Chicago, the co-pilot, and Staff Sgt. John Jacob Wagner, Carlinville, the tail gunner. Both hold the air medal.

Torn by Shells.

The Marauder was flying in formation thru heavy anti-aircraft fire over Duren, Germany, Dec. 2 when it was hit by two 88 millimeter shells. One exploded in the tail and another came up thru the controls. The ship veered out of control. The pilot was wounded in the heel and his right arm broken.

Armstrong straightened out the ship, slowed down over the bomb target, and then peeled off from the formation. He signaled the bombardier to go back in the ship and find out how much damage was done. The top turret gunner had been killed, a big hole blown in the center of the ship, the rudder was gone, and the tail was dangling. The hydraulic system had been knocked out and the plane's bombs couldn't be released. Neither could they be defused.

Quickly the pilot's wounds were temporarily dressed, after which he took over the ship.

Wagner Tells Story.

Squatting in the tail was Wagner.

"When we were hit I had my flak suit off in a jiffy and was in my parachute harness and ready to jump," he said. "When I saw another gunner wounded I knew I couldn't jump and leave him.

"I put on his chute and fixed the rip cord to the plane, so that if the tail broke off and I'd have to shove him out the parachute would open. But then I realized he was so badly hurt that for him even to parachute would mean his death. Then I decided to take my chances with him. I tied him to the place so he was braced for the shock of landing and to keep him from falling out. Now the tail was vibrating back and forth and until we did land I was afraid it would break off any moment."

Lost in Clouds.

The ship, altho rudderless, could be controled by throttles. The crew signaled the command ship. Then, since the Marauder's direction finders, including the electrical compass, were blown out, the command ship directed the way.

In the heavy overcast, however, the guiding plane was lost.

Armstrong studied his maps and the ground and at last recognized two railroads which merged at a highway leading toward the Marauder's airport. The pilot, despite his broken arm, had guided the ship thru the clouds and now with only a little gasoline left attempted the most difficult of all landings—a belly glide. He made it.

Maj. R. H. F. Parsley, South Charleston, W. Va., who entered the newspaper field with Stewart Owen, THE TRIBUNE'S news editor, said later that Col. Gerald E. Williams, commanding the Marauder forces, regarded the fact that the tail hung on until the landing was made as nothing less than miraculous.

SEAMEN WON'T SAIL WITHOUT SOME CIGARETS

Boston, Mass., Dec. 6 (AP).—The cigaret shortage has delayed departure of some vessels, principally in the coastwise coal carrying trade, it was disclosed tonight.

Harrington Pike, port representative for the recruitment and manning division of the war shipping administration, said some merchant seamen have refused to sail until assured of an "adequate" supply of smokes.

REP. LUCE FIRES GUN AND ALMOST LOSES HER CURL

Touring Congressmen Visit Patton's Front.

U. S. 3D ARMY HDQ., Dec. 6 (AP).—Rep. Luce [R., Conn.] and Rep. Merritt [D., N. Y.], chairman of the house military committee, took a hand in the shooting war today. Each fired a single round from a 155 mm. howitzer at German held installations.

The congresswoman, wearing something different in war zone fashions, fired the first shot. She pulled the lanyard like a veteran, but the concussion almost straightened her freshly done curls.

Merritt yanked so hard on the first try that he broke the lanyard and seated himself in the mud. He did all right the second time.

The representatives, two of the 17 touring the war zones, were coached beforehand by a battery commander, Capt. Pierce N. Davis of Loogootee, Ind., and members of the gun crew, including Pvt. 1st Class Hollis Tracy of Indianapolis, Ind.

Gen. Patton Is Guide.

Lt. Gen. Patton conducted the party on a tour of military installations immediately behind the front lines.

At headquarters in mid-morning, all except Mrs. Luce were briefed on the war situation by Patton and his aides before beginning the tour.

Mrs. Luce skipped the briefing and preceded the others to a near-by army hospital, where she chatted with wounded G. Is until the rest of the party caught up.

Her outfit—partly regulation and partly nonregulation—won the admiration of the convalescing soldiers and envious glances from nurses. She wore regulation officers' dress pants and blouse topped off with a brown spotted kerchief tied over her blond curls and a matching scarf.

Wears Gold Gadget.

The neatly pressed pants were tucked in tan fur-lined ski boots, from the top of which G. I. wool socks protruded. On her blouse was a big round gold gadget which she explained was a combination watch, luck charm, and Saint Christopher's medal.

"I've worn it on every trip I've made and it has brought me luck so far," she said.

Gold earrings completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Luce, who was suffering from a cold and sore throat, had her throat swabbed at the hospital before hopping into a mudspattered car for the afternoon tour.

The committee members expressed themselves as particularly pleased with the food and warm clothing the men were getting.

BOMBER PILOT FLIES CRAZILY; FALLS TO DEATH

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 6 [Canadjan Press].—A pilot under training ran amok in a twin-engine bomber today and for four and a half hours endangered lives of civilians and service men as he dived and performed seemingly impossible maneuvers before finally plunging to his death.

Fighter planes attempted to drive him down to an air field. Pilots were instructed not to fire on him, but to try to maneuver him down, but he paid no attention to their efforts and continued his wild acrobatics. Time after time he put his big craft into dives, pulling up below hangar height. The bomber missed persons, buildings, and parked aircraft by scant inches.

Finally, from a height of about 1,000 feet, he went into a roll and dived straight into the ground at Tilsbury Island, six miles south of Vancouver. His name was not immediately announced.

rle of front doors, searched a German police headquarters and a German printing plant, and found nothing within. Then 120 mm. mortar shells began dropping within a few hundred yards of them, making a great "crunch" and throwing dirt and other debris high in the air.

From the courthouse in the center of town one of our jeeps was seen darting across a railroad bridge and within a minute after its safe crossing another shell dropped on the far end of the bridge as an indication the vehicle had been seen.

Sarreguemines, largest French city in the Saar, with a normal population of 14,000, is nine miles southeast of Saarbrucken.

[American troops penetrated German positions in a big tank battle northwest of Sarreguemines, the German DNB news agency said in a broadcast. The German report said there were heavy tank battles between Buschbach and Lixingen. The Americans tried to punch their way thru on a narrow front and succeeded in making some penetrations, said the report.]

POUR ACROSS RIVER

PARIS, Dec. 6 (AP).—Lt. Gen. Patton's American 3d army troops poured across the Saar river at six points today and closed tighter their siege of Saarbrucken, capital of the rich Saar basin.

The 90th infantry division made four new assault boat crossings of the Saar between Saarlautern and Merzig, north of the two original bridgeheads. Patrols of the 10th armored division also thrust across the Saar north of Merzig.

The latest crossings were made approximately two miles north of Saarlautern, where infantry men of the 90th division fought their way into Dillingen on the river's east bank.

Extend Two Bridgeheads.

The 95th division, meanwhile, battled to extend the two original bridgeheads, one in Saarlautern itself and the other south of the city, in the face of continuous artillery fire.

[The German high command said American "shock troops" who crossed the Saar at Merzig had been wiped out, but conceded that violent fighting was in progress east of Saarlautern, where Nazi pillbox garrisons were resisting strong attacks.]

The Americans held Saarlautern firmly, despite German claims that it had been recaptured. The enemy continued to pour heavy artillery fire into the city and brisk fighting progressed in the suburbs of Roden and Fraulautern, on the east side of the Saar.

The 5th division's 10th infantry regiment pushed to the Saar in two places and entered Wadgassen, three miles southeast of Saarlautern, and Wehrden, six miles west of Saarbrucken. The latter town is the closest one to Saarbrucken taken by the Americans.

Seven Miles Gain on Right.

Other divisions on the right rolled the Germans back as much as seven miles along a 12 mile front. One spearhead was almost due east of Sarreguemines and within six miles of the reich frontier.

The artillery bombardment of Saarbrucken grew in intensity. Parts of the city were aflame, field dispatches said.

The 6th armored division has advanced to Welferding, one-half mile west of Sarreguemines. The 26th division's 104th infantry progressed a half mile thru Le Grand Bois, five miles southeast of Sarreguemines. The 4th armored division has reached a point beyond Singling, which is eight miles southeast of Sarreguemines.

The 11th infantry regiment of the 5th division captured Fort St. Quentin near Metz, taking prisoner 22 officers and 751 enlisted men. Three remaining enemy held Metz forts—Driant, St. Jeanne d'Arc, and Pappeville—still are holding out, but their capitulation is inevitable.

Counter-Attack 1st Army.

German forces in the Aachen sector to the north lashed out with three strong counter-attacks against Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army troops holding the village of Bergstein, six miles southwest of Duren, but were thrown back with losses after once advancing two-thirds of a mile into the outskirts of the town.

United States 9th army troops on the left made their first attempt to send patrols across the flooded Roer river last night, but the swift current forced them to withdraw to the west bank without enemy reaction.

Despite an overcast, the 9th air force put up more than 200 bombers and 430 fighter bombers in support of the 1st, 3d, and 9th armies. The fighter bombers blasted German strong points still holding out on the west side of the Roer in Julich, scoring 20 direct hits on the sports stadium which the 9th army is trying to clear.

At the southern end of the front Lt. Gen. Patch's 7th army slugged to within five miles of Colmar, the last major Alsatian city in German hands. It met only moderate resistance and there were signs that the enemy was pulling back over the Rhine. Steady traffic eastward from Colmar, which has a normal population of 43,000, indicated that the Germans were evacuating their forces across the Rhine bridge at Neuf Brisach.

U. S. BOMBERS HIT NAZI OIL PLANT AND RAIL YARD

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).—An American bomber and fighter fleet today made the 17th daylight attack on Merseburg's synthetic oil plant and a raid on freight yards at the Ruhr feeder lines in Bielefeld. Some 800 Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by a similar number of Thunderbolts and Mustangs, dropped 3,000 tons of bombs. Four bombers and two fighters were lost to heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The R. A. F. made a 1,300 plane blow at night against a synthetic oil plant and two freight yards, which were not identified.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC (AP).—The Victoria cross, Britain's highest war decoration, has been awarded posthumously to Corp. Sefanaia Sukanaivalu, a Fiji Islander who offered his body to Japanese machine gun bullets to save his comrades. He was a member of a Fijian battalion in the fighting on Bougainville Island, the Solomons, last spring under American command.

CAESAR, '5 OR 6,' SHOWS G.I. HOW TO DIVIDE CARDS

Filipino Lad Proves Adept at Blackjack.

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LEYTE ISLAND, Philippine Islands, Dec. 6.—Caesar, a houseboy's son, came into a tent today. His father says he is 5 or maybe 6. He's a tiny thing.

"Hello, Caesar," a G. I. said, trying to strike just the right tone to use to the mite, who isn't even sure of his age. Caesar grinned bashfully. The G. I. tried him on some picture magazines, but Caesar wasn't exactly consumed with desire for book learning.

On a makeshift table were some playing cards. "Lookey, Caesar," the G. I. said and showed him how the cards, by leaning against one another, could be built into a sizeable pile. He left him with the cards.

Soon he heard some one shuffling the cards. It was Caesar and he was shuffling with the snap of an old-time gambler.

Caesar Deals 'Em Out.

Caesar cut them and briskly dealt out hands of two cards each. He picked up the nearest hand, held them close to his chest, and carefully spread them to reveal the nearest corner markings. He laid them down and took a third card from the stack.

"Good," he said, and laid down an 8, a 7, and a 5. "Twenty," he said. The second hand brought glee. It was an ace and a queen. The third made him ponder. At last he took another card and after peeking at it threw all three down on the table. It was an 8, and two 7s. "Twenty-two," he said and followed with muttering in Filipino so violent that the G. I. knew if he were his father and understood Filipino he would have washed his mouth.

Up to a Thousand.

"Don't tell me you can't count?" the G. I. said, knowing he had never been to school one day of his 5 or 6 years. "Up to a thousand," Caesar said matter of factly.

"And that game you've been playing is blackjack?" the G. I. asked.

"You betcha. It's a better game than poker," said Caesar, be he 5 or even 6.

JAPS DRIVE FOR KUNMING; PERIL U. S. AIR FORCE

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 6 (AP).—A Japanese drive was in full swing today toward Kunming, loss of which would hamstring the prospective India-China supply route and deliver the United States 14th air force a crippling blow. This was indicated in a bulletin from American headquarters which reported 14th air force reconnaissance in the Poseh area in western Kwangsi province near the Yunnan province border.

Dispatches from Kweichow province reported that Chinese reënforcements hurried there from northwest China already are in action against the Japanese and claimed the situation had improved slightly. The recovery of Pachai, 65 miles southeast of Kweiyang, was taken as evidence of the strengthening of Chinese resistance. The Chinese admitted the loss of Tushan railroad town 75 miles southeast of Kweiyang.

American 14th air force headquarters announced that its planes had sunk, probably sunk or damaged 16 Japanese freighters.

Cicero Child, 2, Is Dead of Patricia's Ailment

Vos of 1425 S. 58th av., Cicero. The child was taken to a hospital Oct. 21, but returned to her home after doctors said the blood disease was incurable. Patricia Attaway, 6, ill with the disease in St. Charles hospital, Aurora, sat up in bed again yesterday, but her condition was reported "unchanged."

RADIO DOCTOR CURES PATIENT FAR OVER SEA

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC, Dec. 6 (AP).—Seaman Elmer Hall of Louisville, Ky., fell unconscious recently on a ship in the Pacific and there was no doctor aboard. The radio operator called the navy at Honolulu and Lt. Comdr. Edwin C. Baum of the medical corps was soon at a microphone and Hall's symptoms had been described.

"Put a stethoscope over his heart and put the ear pieces close to the microphone," the doctor told the men at the patient's side hundreds of miles away. His instructions were obeyed. The doctor listened intently, then said:

"Your man has an asthmatic attack. Wrap him in blankets with hot water bottles, and give him an injection of adrenalin chloride. Then get him to a hospital."

Hall has recovered and returned to duty.

PHILIPPINE WAR 2 MONTHS AHEAD OF PLAN: ROMULO

Reports 'Doug' Careful with Yanks' Lives.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 [Special].—The invasion of the Philippines is two months ahead of schedule and is proceeding well, with prospects for the liberation of the entire archipelago, Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, said at a press conference today.

Brig. Gen. Romulo.

Gen. Romulo, who accompanied President Sergio Osmena of the Philippines to Leyte and was wounded in the invasion, recently returned here by direction of his president and of Gen. MacArthur.

One of his missions in returning will be to report to congress on the progress of the campaign and on the Filipinos' gratitude for their liberation. He will do that on the floor of the house tomorrow.

Japs to Fight Hard.

Gen. Romulo expressed his certainty that the Japanese will defend the Philippines to the bitter end.

He was also sure that Gen. MacArthur could conclude the campaign more speedily if he did not care about wasting American lives.

He quoted Gen. MacArthur as saying he recognized fully his responsibility to American mothers and wives and that he would rather proceed more slowly than needlessly lose the lives of his soldiers. Furthermore, he knew the Japanese would reënforce their troops and they might as well be disposed of in the Philippines as elsewhere.

Loyal to America.

Gen. Romulo praised the friendship of the Americans and the Filipinos and the loyalty of his people to the United States. He pictured the Filipinos as overwhelmingly supporters of this country and as bitterly hating the Japanese, particularly in view of their ruthlessness and atrocities.

Gen. Romulo held up the picture of orderly civil government in cities and towns of Leyte to all the world as a unique example of transition from military occupation and one that meant that our invasion was truly a liberation, with the people prepared to exercise their responsibilities under constitutional liberty.

In speaking of the conduct of American troops, he recalled many incidents of our soldiers giving the captives food, clothing, and medical attention.

Land from Subs.

The underground movement, he related, spread immediately as a civilian operation thruout the islands after the collapse of the Filipino army at Bataan. For a long time before our invasion the underground was in constant touch with Gen. MacArthur by radio. Eventually the civilian organization was strengthened by the arrival of Filipino military officers trained in California and who were landed from submarines.

On occasion the underground had reported the position of Japanese naval units, he said.

The movement, he added, now was operating effectively thruout the islands, including Luzon, but for military reasons he could not disclose details.

Sight Returning

JUDY ANN KOCH.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 6 (AP).—Seven year old Judy Ann Koch, who lost her sight and nearly her life in a vain effort to rescue a dog from the path of an automobile, found her vision mysteriously returning today.

As the dark haired girl recognized toys sent from well wishers over the nation, her parents said physicians had discovered no medical reason for her recovery. Five specialists who attended Judy while she lay unconscious for 50 days, said of her blindness:

"This is not a surgical case. We're watching and waiting."

Judy had been blind since Sept. 14, when she dashed in front of the automobile, trying to save a neighbor's dog. The dog was killed and Judy was sent, unconscious, to Lakewood hospital.

MRS. HOOPER IS GIVEN DECREE IN MEXICAN COURT

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Henry Hooper of 229 Lake Shore drive, Chicago, said today she had obtained a divorce from her husband, a Chicago business man.

Mrs. Hooper came here on Oct. 12. The divorce was obtained by agreement with her husband, from from she brought letters attesting to his agreement. She applied for the divorce in Tetecala, state of Morelos, on Nov. 7, and it was granted there six days ago. The delay was due to the time demanded by the Tetecala officials for notification of her husband.

Mrs. Hooper's lawyer in Mexico was Guillermo Capdzvielle of Mexico City. Mrs. Hooper said she would leave Saturday for Chicago.

Chungking Exchanges New Proposals with Reds

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 6 (AP).—New proposals have been exchanged toward settling differences between the Chungking government and Chinese Communists, Wang Shih-chieh, minister of information, disclosed today. He did not give details.

DEATH THREATS HALT TRIAL IN FRENCH PURGE

BY ROBERT SAGE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The serious political situation developing from conflict between resistance groups and increasingly bold elements of so-called fifth columnists has been marked in the last 24 hours by two new incidents in southeastern France.

At Digne, a small mountain town north of Nice, the trial of alleged collaborators was called off when lawyers and judges received letters threatening them with death. In Lyons, the sentencing to death of pro-Vichy former Prefect Angeli resulted in demonstrations and counter-demonstrations.

Ask Court Martial.

At Digne, the local committee of liberation today telegraphed the minister of justice and government officials to replace the court of justice with a court martial so that the trial and punishment of collaborators might proceed.

Death threats to the court were contained in letters signed by "The Secret Committee of Immediate Action." The letters warned lawyers not to defend militiamen, members of Jacques Doriot's French People's party, and other collaborationists. Denying authorship, members of the local resistance movement assert that the threats are a fifth columnist maneuver aimed at discrediting resistance in the eyes of the public.

Shout "Murderers" at Jury.

Many persons took part in the Lyons demonstrations, tho the condemned prefect's offenses were balanced by so much evidence in his favor that a number of persons were said to have shouted "Murderers" when the jury found him guilty of persecuting French patriots.

Lyons later was plastered with stickers urging students to demonstrate against the verdict. Instead, students and others staged hostile demonstrations outside the buildings of two newspapers which had defended Angeli.

2 DEAD, 60 HURT AS FIRE LEVELS CHURCH HALL

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 6 (AP).—At least two persons perished and from 60 to 80 others were injured tonight in a fire which swept the parish hall of St. Ambrose's Catholic church during a card and bingo party.

Firemen still were searching the wreckage of the one story frame building for possible additional victims. Police estimated that 200 persons were in the hall when the blaze began.

William J. Cordle, who was taking tickets for the party at the door, was one of the first to discover the fire. He said:

"The fire traveled so fast that before I got out the back of my head was singed."

Vanguards 35 Miles from Austrian Border.

LONDON, Dec. 7 [Thursday]—(AP). The Red army scored gains ranging up to 16 miles yesterday on the southern approaches to Budapest west of the Danube river, as Russian front dispatches placed soviet vanguards within 35 miles of the Austrian frontier.

The Russian war bulletin said the 3d Ukraine army captured 50 places in the drive on Budapest, including Racalmas, 28 miles south of the Hungarian capital. The Germans said they had abandoned Ercsi, only 13 miles south, and asserted the Russians had crossed to the Danube's west bank from Csepel Island below the capital.

Entrenched on Island.

Units of the 2d Ukraine army are entrenched solidly on the 30 mile island in positions only six miles from Budapest's outskirts. Racalmas is only four miles from the southern tip of the island.

German radio broadcasts declared the Red army was striking at Budapest in a new offensive from the south, northeast and east, but there was no confirmation from Moscow.

At the lower end of Lake Balaton the Russians reported the capture of Balaton-Bereny, 42 miles from the Austrian frontier, and said almost all of the 50 mile southern shore of the lake was in Russian hands.

Gain in Yugoslavia.

On a 46 mile front between Lake Balaton and the Draja river frontier with northern Yugoslavia, other 3d army forces captured 40 places, registering gains of over 12 miles.

NEW BRIDGEHEAD FLANKS NAZIS' BOLOGNA BULGE

ROME, Dec. 6 (AP).—British and Polish troops have established a bridgehead across the Lamone river, four miles southeast of Faenza, posing a new flanking threat to Nazi troops in a bulge southwest of Bologna, the allied high command announced today.

Evidence that the Germans are withdrawing from the bulge came in an announcement that the American 5th army had captured Penzola, a mountain town south of Imola, junction point on the Bologna-Faenza highway.

Northeast of Faenza British 8th army troops cleared the Ravenna-Godo road and, aided by Italian partisans, were clearing out pockets of Germans east of Ravenna along the six mile canal leading to the Adriatic.

J. Bonelli in Chicago Avenue police court yesterday.

The bond was increased after it developed that Hansen already was at liberty on $100 bond in connection with a hit-run accident Nov. 2 in which Maggie Markevic, 70, of 671 N. Dearborn st., was injured.

Judge Bonelli continued the disorderly conduct charge hearing to next Wednesday, the date to which an inquest into Mrs. Lockhart's death also was continued.

SERGEANT, A ONE MAN ARMY, WINS HIGHEST MEDAL

Kansan's Deeds Account for 18 Nazis in Day.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST DIVISION IN GERMANY, Dec. 6.—Staff Sgt. Walter D. Ehlers, 23, a modest, unassuming farm youth from Manhattan, Kas., today was awarded America's highest military decoration, the congressional medal of honor.

The 1st division spearheaded the invasion of Normandy just six months ago and Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner reviewed the campaign, paying tribute to his men as Sgt. Ehlers stood beside him.

Sgt. Ehlers, who has been wounded three times, received the medal for an incredible series of deeds in less than 24 hours on June 9-10, when the 1st division was fighting inland from the beaches of France thru a nest of hedgerows toward Caumont.

In that period, among other things, Ehlers destroyed two machine gun emplacements and two mortar positions. In hand to hand bayonet fighting he accounted for four Germans.

Asked today how many he had killed, Ehlers blushed, shuffled his feet, and mumbled, "18 that I saw." One of them was a sniper who had just shot him in the back, but in falling Ehlers was able, with his Garand, to kill the German at 100 yards.

Took Only One Prisoner.

In those two days, Ehlers added, his squad killed many more Germans. The way he explained it was: "We only took one prisoner. He'd already been wounded."

During his action packed 24 hours, according to official citation, Ehlers led his squad forward without waiting for orders, while protecting them at the expense of himself. The citation stated:

"He had in the case of each of his glorious feats in any instance involving danger acted as the spearhead bearing the brunt of the enemy's resistance. He had gone alone into places which only strongly armed patrols would have been expected to assault. He had exposed himself to the deadliest small arms fire so that the lives of others could be preserved. His tactical services would normally have required a force of at least a platoon in strength. They had saved Company L [18th infantry] many hours and they removed a threat of any serious counter-attack."

Bayonets Account for 7 Nazis.

Leading an attack near Goville, France, Ehlers found himself as usual out in front of his squad, which was headed for a German strong point. Unexpectedly he encountered some German soldiers and went to work with his bayonet, altho often being attacked by two men at a time. When his squad moved on, seven Germans lay dead. The squad then approached the strong point from the right flank, covering Ehlers as he crawled thru grass alive with machine gun bullets. At length he rushed the gun alone. A few minutes later he emerged and motioned his squad on to another target.

Two mortar positions manned by 15 Germans next came under attack of the Kansas one man army and his 11 squad mates. Altho the mortars were protected by crossfiring machine guns, the squad killed or captured all the Germans, Ehlers personally accounting for three.

Turning toward one machine gun, which had hampered their approach, the squad started to work on it, allowing Ehlers to get within 12 feet. Jumping to his feet, with a Browning automatic rifle, Ehlers streaked for the gun position and altho outnumbered, silenced the gun and its crew. His squad still had not suffered a casualty.

Covers Men's Withdrawal.

Next day his platoon, still in the lead, found Germans in much greater strength bringing up more mortars, and was forced to pull back. Ehlers' squad covered the withdrawal of others, then he did it himself for his own men.

In doing so he was wounded by sniper fire. Discovering his Browning gunner wounded, Ehlers carried him to safety and then returned thru a field of fire to recover the valuable gun. Back once more with his outfit, he refused to be evacuated and started out once more at the head of his squad.

CAPT. ROBERT BURNS WINS 3 MEDALS FOR EXPLOITS IN FRANCE

For reorganizing the demoralized remnants of three rifle companies under heavy enemy fire in France and leading them into battle, and other exploits, Capt. Robert F. Burns, 4028 Washington blvd., has been awarded the silver star, the bronze star medal, and combat infantryman's badge, the war department announced yesterday. The leadership feat which earned him the silver star was performed on July 12, 1944, while he was in service with the 90th division, 3d army. Capt. Burns is a graduate of the University of Illinois, college of fine arts, 1936, and of Austin High school and St. Mel's Grammar school. He entered service in February, 1941.

Eden Insists Upon Right to Intervene in Italy.

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).—A wide open British-American split in policy over liberated Europe's political quarrels developed today. Britain insisted upon her right to intervene when necessary and the United States was equally firm on a hands-off attitude.

Watching the continent's political strife with mounting concern, the house of commons heard Foreign Secretary Eden serve notice that Britain intended to stick to her position regardless of American reaction.

The British government's position was outlined 24 hours after the United States formally declared that European peoples should be allowed to work out their own governments without interference.

The immediate issue revolved around Britain's intervention in Italy's affairs, specifically on its objection to Count Carlo Sforza, a Liberal, as Italian foreign minister in the Bonomi government.

British Stand Reaffirmed.

Eden dealt with the Italian situation in blunt terms as he said:

"I must repeat to the house that I maintain the British government has a perfect right to express an opinion to another government about a minister under conditions such as these."

The American statement yesterday said:

". . . We expect the Italians to work out their problems of government along democratic lines without influence from outside. This policy would apply to an even more pronounced degree with regard to governments of the united nations in their liberated territories."

It was said in Washington today that the basic American policy should apply particularly to strife torn Greece, where the United States was considering application of its hands-off position.

Commons Debate Tomorrow.

Eden announced that a debate on the Greek crisis would be held in commons on Friday.

A query from Ivor Thomas, Laborite, as to whether the British government's views were being modified in view of the American position quickly drew from Eden the response:

"I can assure you that my answers are revised up to the very last minute."

Cries of "No, no!" met Thomas' suggestion that Britain "withdraw gracefully" and admit that "a blunder has been made."

Another member raised the question of whether Britain's maintenance of the present Belgian government was "dictated solely by military considerations."

Eden responded that any action taken by allied troops in Belgium was carried out under instructions of Gen. Eisenhower and that the supreme commander must be free to take whatever action he thought necessary to keep order.

Several Factors Uncertain.

The European situation was complicated by a number of uncertain factors. Among them were:

1. The United States state department announcement that its position was "reaffirmed" to Britain and Italy left open to speculation the question of whether it went also to Russia, a member of the allied control commission.

2. The question of whether Britain's firm position has been adopted in light of decisions reached at the Moscow conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin on spheres of influence in Europe.

3. The future position of Russia in left vs. right political arguments of southern European countries.

Eden Says Neutrals Shut Doors on War Criminals

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).—All neutral countries "that have been approached" have now given satisfactory assurances that they will not give refuge to any war criminals, Foreign Secretary Eden disclosed in the house of commons today.

N. Y. GREEK EDITOR BLAMES COMMUNISTS FOR ATHENS UNREST

New York, N. Y., Dec. 6 [Special].—The events which have led the Greek people into bloodshed, just a month after their liberation, are the result of an attempt by a communistic minority to impose dictatorship by force on the Greek people, under the pretense that it represents their will, according to Solon G. Vlasto, publisher of the Greek daily Atlantis, the oldest Greek newspaper in the United States.

"The communistic minority EAM [National Liberation Front], since all its patriotic and conservative elements have left its ranks, does not represent the will of the Greek people," Vlasto said. "This is evident by the insistence of EAM not to lay down its arms. Should EAM actually represent the majority of the Greek people it would not have been necessary to keep its armed branch ELAS, with raised guns, as the only way to impose the will of the majority of the people.

"It is not by bullets or bayonets but by votes that a civilized nation expresses its opinion how it should be governed and it is absurd to imagine that the Greek population is turning to a new war."

THOUSANDS OF BRITISH PROTEST GREEK POLICY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 6.—While Foreign Secretary Eden and Prime Minister Churchill prepared to face critics of British policy in Greece Friday in the house of commons, protests against British military intervention poured into Downing street, the foreign office and commons today from factories, shipyards, and at least one city council.

The protests had as their main theme the warning that use of British troops to support the Papandreou government did not have the support of the British people. Mood of the workers, inflamed by leftist elements, was indicated by events at the Fair aviation factory today when 2,000 workers defied a management ban, staged a mass meeting and passed a "hands off Greece" resolution, which was submitted to the foreign office. A deputation from another factory visited 10 Downing st., and handed in a protest signed by hundreds of workers.

Eighty shop stewards claiming to represent 50,000 London war workers buttonholed members of parliament in lobbies, demanding that Britain cease intervention in Greek affairs. One member of the deputation said he was brusquely rebuffed by Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin. Aldermen and councillors of the Manchester city council forwarded a letter to the prime minister, saying the British government's policy in Greece "can only give satisfaction to our fascist enemies."

REVEAL NAMES OF 4 TO CONDUCT INQUIRY ON CHICAGO SCHOOLS

The National Education association yesterday disclosed the membership of a committee which will conduct an investigation of "alleged mistreatment of the teaching personnel by the Chicago public school system." Plans for the investigation were announced last October.

The committee will include Virginia Kinnaird, Fort Wayne, Ind., high school teacher; Orrville C. Pratt of Spokane, Wash., past president of the N. E. A.; Donald Du Shane, executive secretary of the N. E. A.'s national commission for defense of democracy thru education, and Dr. Mark A. May, director of the institute of human relations at Yale university.

The commission said one of the allegations made by groups requesting the investigation was that teachers had been transferred to less desirable positions because of "speaking out" against school board rulings. No date for the inquiry was disclosed.

Husband Killed

MRS. L. F. PHILLIPS.

Mrs. Betty Phillips, daughter of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, was in a Chicago hospital last night awaiting the baby whose soldier father, Tech. Sgt. Leonard Franklin Phillips, was reported killed in France Nov. 18. Tho Mrs. Phillips received the war department's telegram last Sunday, she did not make it public until yesterday, just before leaving her home, 7410 Oglesby av., for the hospital. Dr. Bundesen, president of the Chicago board of health, said yesterday his daughter still is hopeful that her husband may be alive. She is hopeful also that the baby will be a boy. Mrs. Phillips met her husband when both were students at Rollins college, Winter Park, Fla., where he was a football and basketball player. Before entering service, Sgt. Phillips was employed by Swift & Co. in Chicago.

NAZIS PROBE FOR MORALE FAILURE IN YANKS' RANKS

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY IN GERMANY, Dec. 6.—In the belief that failure to achieve an early victory has softened our soldiers' morale, the propaganda arm of the German army is redoubling its efforts to find some weakness of character among American fighters which can be exploited.

Prisoners taken in recent fighting say their psychological warfare officers are questioning captured Americans closely about many matters not directly connected with tactical situations.

Ask Views of Officers.

This is being done on the theory that the Americans now are more receptive to German "morale destroying" propaganda because they are supposed to be impressed and disappointed by our "high strung hopes for a victorious end to the war in the near future."

Some of these Germans overheard American prisoners being asked whether their units were afraid to be captured, and what is an American's reaction to being captured: Is he happy that the war is over for him or depressed?

Other interrogators want to know about soldiers' relations with superior officers: What does an American think he is fighting for, and what are his views regarding the future course of the war?

Inquire About Communism.

In addition, some are asked for opinions on bolshevism, the Russian army, and the threat of communist doctrines to western civilization.

Other interrogators ask captured Americans if they feel conscious about the "Jewish question" or whether they are concerned over the military commitment of Jewish Americans.

RABBI RESIGNS IN DISPUTE OVER SCHOOL CAROLS

Congregation Disowns Views on Yule.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 6 [Special].—A rabbi who attempted to ban singing of Christmas carols and the story of the birth of Christ from the city's public schools resigned from his synagogue today amid a storm of public indignation and disavowal of his actions by his congregation.

The rabbi is Harold Englander of Congregation Ahavath Israel, who protested Thursday to the board of education that Christmas carols and "some of the hymns found in the school hymnals are of a sectarian character." His letter contended that "nothing of a religious character should enter our school system," and protested that kindergarten children had been "well versed in the story of Joseph and Mary and the Star of Bethlehem."

Claimed Other Support.

Rabbi Englander said he and the two other Kingston rabbis believed "the principle of separation of church and state, one of the bulwarks of our democracy, should at all times be strictly adhered to."

Publication of his letter in the Kingston Press brought a deluge of letters to newspaper offices assailing his stand. One of them was from Mrs. Harold W. Clayton, wife of an army colonel overseas.

"It would seem that the rabbi has chosen a very inopportune time to bring out the grievance," wrote Mrs. Clayton.

"I would like to remind the rabbi that there are millions of our men fighting so we can sing our Christmas carols. My husband is overseas where the schools are closed, as are the churches. I do not need to remind the rabbi what has happened to his people in these countries. He should be glad that in America he can sing any song he chooses, when he chooses, in any church he chooses, where any religious group can have their own organization, where they can teach their own ideas without persecution."

Congregation Disavows Letter.

In a letter to the school board, Nathan Badian, president of the Jewish congregation, said Rabbi Englander's letter "was not written at the direction of this congregation" and it "expressed solely his own views." Badian said "so far as the singing of Christmas carols is concerned, his views are not the views of our congregation nor of Kingston's Jewry. Whatever differences of doctrine or theology may exist, we can all recognize the beauty of the Christmas music."

A special meeting of the congregation will be held Sunday to receive the rabbi's formal resignation.

Clarence Rowland, member of the school board, said singing of carols "will be continued." A special committee of the board is scheduled to report tomorrow on the rabbi's protests to the board.

Rabbi Englander was not available for comment tonight.

HOUSE EXTENDS LIMIT FOR PEARL HARBOR TRIALS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Amid protests against the administration's concealment of the real story of Pearl Harbor, the house today passed by voice vote a measure extending for six months the time for courts-martial of persons connected with that military disaster.

The bill, which now goes to the White House, extends the legal period for trials, which would expire tomorrow, until next June 7. Congress twice before voted similar six month extensions after the administration refused to bring to trial Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, both retired, who were commanders at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck.

Rep. Vinson [D., Ga.], chairman of the naval affairs committee, said he hoped today's bill authorized the army and navy to continue their investigations.

"There has been plenty of time for investigating," interjected Minority Leader Martin [R., Mass.]. "What the people want now is information."

DEMANDS BRITAIN CEASE SAVING FANATICAL NAZIS

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).—Seriously wounded Nazi prisoners, unwilling to accept non-German blood, have been kept alive against their will by transfusions on the British 2d army front, Norman Bower, Conservative member of commons, said today. He served notice that he would ask the war secretary "if he will take steps to see that the lives of fanatical Nazi soldiers are no longer saved against their will."

COMMONS EXPECTED TO BACK KING TODAY ON CANADIAN DRAFT

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 6 (AP).—Party leaders agreed tonight to wind up debate on Canada's conscription crisis and vote late tomorrow on the government's motion of confidence in its new policy to draft 16,000 home army men to meet infantry reënforcement needs abroad. The government is expected to win with a comfortable majority.

Prime Minister MacKenzie King, in announcing the decision to the house of commons, said it was agreed that the debate "should not be unduly prolonged" because it might have "an unsettling effect thruout the country."

Justice Minister Louis St. Laurent, leading spokesman for those French speaking members of parliament who are supporting the government's partial conscription policy, appealed to French Canada to cooperate with the government in its new policy.

PEARL HARBOR'S 11 GHOST SHIPS HAUNT THE JAPS

Still Fighting, but Foe's Carriers Are Sunk.

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Dec. 6 (AP).—Three years ago tomorrow at dawn planes from a Japanese carrier task force sank or damaged 18 United States warships at Pearl Harbor.

Today, every one of those six Japanese carriers lies on the bottom of the Pacific ocean, while 11 of those United States warships are on active duty in the Pacific. Still another fought the Japanese a year before she was sunk.

The guns, machinery, and even sections of the hulls of four other Pearl Harbor attack victims have been salvaged and used against the Japanese. Only the target ship Utah remains on the bottom of Pearl Harbor.

Sink Eight Warships.

Five battleships which Japan boasted were destroyed turned their 14 and 16 inch guns on a Japanese force with such fury and accuracy that the entire enemy group was wiped out in less than 15 minutes.

In this fight on Nov. 25 in Surigao strait, Philippines, the Pennsylvania, Maryland, Tennessee, California, and West Virginia, all damaged at Pearl Harbor, and the Mississippi helped sink two Japanese battleships, two cruisers and four destroyers.

The sixth battleship raised from Pearl Harbor was the U. S. S. Nevada, which helped bombard the Normandy coast on D-day, June 6. The light cruisers Honolulu and Raleigh have been in many actions. The Honolulu helped sink nine enemy warships Nov. 30, 1942, in the Solomons, and participated in the Leyte landings.

Helena Sunk in 1942.

The light cruiser Helena has fallen victim a second time to the Japanese. She was sunk in Kula gulf in July, 1943, after participating in many battles with the Japanese.

The destroyer Shaw, minelayer Ogolala, tender Curtiss, and repair ship Vestal were the other four ships which survived to fight in the Pacific.

The Japanese saw four of their six Pearl Harbor raiding carriers sunk at the battle of Midway, in June, 1942. They were the Soryu, Hiryu, Kaga, and Akagi. American carrier plane pilots sank the Shokaku last June 19. The Zuikaku was sunk by navy pilots in the second battle of the Philippines, Oct. 22-27.

Senate Group Approves Kirk as Envoy to Italy

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—The senate foreign relations committee today recommended confirmation of Alexander C. Kirk of Illinois as ambassador to Italy.

13 ARE INDICTED IN MICHIGAN'S BRIBERY PROBE

2 State Senators Are Among Those Cited.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 6 [Special].—Two reelected state senators, three former house members already convicted in an earlier grand jury case, and eight practicioners of chiropractic or naturopathy were indicted today by Judge Leland W. Carr's one man grand jury on a charge of conspiring to influence by bribery the 1939 legistature's action on a measure to give professional standing to so-called "naturopaths."

Senators Carl F. De Lano, Kalamazoo, and Chester M. Howell, Chesaning, both veteran Republican lawmakers, headed today's list of legislative defendants, charged with accepting bribes to assist the legislative objectives of the American Naturopathic Association of Michigan. The former legislators named as bribetakers were Edward J. Walsh, William Buckley, and Francis Nowak, all Detroit Democrats, convicted in August of participating in a bribery conspiracy involving finance company measures. The latter three, under three to five year prison sentences, have been freed under bond pending outcome of an appeal of the earlier case.

Bill Died in Committee.

Named in the new warrant as bribe givers are: Mikhel Sherman and Paul Faulkner, former presidents of the American Naturopathic Association of Michigan; Max Rosenfeld, a member of that association's directorate; and Gunnar Wykander, chiropractor and former treasurer of the association, all of Detroit; Martin W. Hillebrandt, a Battle Creek chiropractor and former chairman of the association's finance committee; Ernest W. Alden, now of Syracuse, N. Y.; and two brothers, Harry E. and Clayton McKinney, who formerly operated a naturopathic clinic at Centerville. The former is reputed to be in "North or South Dakota" and the latter in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Special Prosecutor Kim Sigler explained that all of the naturopath defendants were "active" during the 1939 session in efforts to push their bill thru the legislature, but met a barrier in the senate state affairs committee, where the bill died.

"Several Thousand Dollars."

Sigler said "several thousand dollars" changed hands in promotion of the measure, whose purpose was creation of a three member examining board, made up of "reputable practitioners" who would pass on applicants and license them under the law as "naturopathic doctors" eligible to use the initials "N. D." after their names. Various practitioners of the "healing arts" could qualify, Sigler said, including persons giving health and mineral baths, electrical treatments, and several types of massage. Appointments to the board would have been made by the governor under the bill's terms.

NEW LIBERAL PARTY HEAD.

LONDON, Dec. 6 [AP].—Herbert Louis Samuel, one time high commissioner for Palestine and president of the British Institute of Philosophy, was elected leader of the Liberal party in the house of lords today. He succeeds the 86 year Robert O. Mitnes, who resigned because of failing health.

3 YEARS OF WAR INSURE VICTORY BUT NOT PEACE

China and Russia Dark Spots in Picture.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—The United States finished off three costly years of war today with full confidence in military victory but shaken faith in winning the peace.

The eve of the third anniversary of Pearl Harbor is marked by political disputes with Britain, the latest of which is just developing over Italy and Greece, and lack of certainty about Russia's future course in Europe. Thus the American people and government face a critical question: Can the allies remain unified in peace as in war?

A decisive answer may be had within three months, after President Roosevelt meets with Dictator Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill. The main objective of the meeting will be to work out common policies on just such issues as political freedom in Europe and the exact role of the great powers in the proposed security organization.

Dark Spots on Map.

All leaders here agree, in looking back over the past 36 months, that it was common purpose—to batter the enemy into unconditional surrender—which made possible the advances toward victory already achieved in Europe and the Pacific.

There are but two dark spots on military maps now. One is the grave weakness of war weary China and the other the lack of a major offensive by Russia on Germany's eastern front to match the Anglo American-allied assault in the west.

Everywhere the war has moved a long way from the days when the Japanese navy menaced Alaska and the Pacific northwest and the Afrika corps of Marshal Rommel threatened to cut the British empire at Suez and to link the axis thru India.

Ahead of Schedule.

In the Pacific the war is now many months ahead of the schedules then laid down. Victory over Japan by mid-1946 seems probable to military authorities here, who once talked of 1947-'48. The Japanese fleet is crippled; only the Japanese army remains to be "met" in mass. Unprecedented production in the United States has put the greatest amphibious forces in history into the Pacific.

The war in Europe is now obviously behind the long range schedules. For at least two years military men here have talked of a possible German collapse at the opening of this winter. It has not come because Nazi leaders decided to force the fight to the limit. At the moment they rule Germany at pistol point and resistance will continue until that rule is broken.

Hopes for a fairly early victory—earlier than Churchill's prediction for sometime next summer—are based on the expectation that the Russians will soon spring the other side of the allied trap and drive toward Berlin from Warsaw.

Charter Plans Upset.

But the nearer victory comes on the battle line the more complex appears the world of the Atlantic charter which Churchill and Roosevelt projected in Britain's dark months before Pearl Harbor. Half a dozen political situations in Europe hold the seeds of future wars.

The Churchill-Stalin agreement on a common policy in Yugoslavia technically cleared the way for a working agreement between the resistance leader, Marshal Tito, and King Peter's government in exile without making specific provision for the Serbs. In diplomatic quarters here there is every conviction that the Serbs will never accept Tito and that conditions in Yugoslava are full of dynamite.

Czechoslovakia has worked out a stable arrangement with Russia but Poland remains torn between the rival exiled government, which has British and American support, and the Lublin Committee of National Liberation which has soviet backing. At the moment prospects for bringing the two groups together and settling the exiled governments row with Russia over territory are bleak.

The Sforza Case.

As for Italy, allied differences were pointed up by the American admonition to Britain that the people of defeated Italy and "even more" those of the liberated countries should choose their governments without interference.

The British, without consulting Washington, had vetoed selection of Count Carlo Sforza as foreign minister. Today Anthony Eden reaffirmed Britain's stand in commons. His statement was about as expected here, officials said, but it was also expected that hereafter Britain would not take such action in an area of joint control without consultation.

The declaration on Italy immediately raised the question of how the hands-off policy might be actively applied to Greece, where British troops are fighting the still-armed EAM groups that resisted the Germans during Greece's occupation.

Situation in Greece.

The United States has no troops in Greece. Diplomatic authorities here say they do not think that the EAM, with a sprinkling of powerful Communist leaders, necessarily represents a majority of the Greeks. On the other hand, they contend that the Greek regime which went back into the country with British support also lacks majority support.

It appears that moral persuasions may be brought to bear to get the British to modify their policies in Greece and seek an immediate end to the shooting. Simultaneously pressure may be exerted to prevent the Communists in Greece and other European countries from establishing minority controls.

British Warships Silence Guns on Adriatic Island

ROME, Italy, Dec. 6 (AP).—British warships and planes attacked the northern Adriatic island of Lussino on Dec. 3, destroying shipping and silencing enemy batteries, a joint naval-air bulletin said today.

DENIES REMUS' $196,700 CLAIM AGAINST O'HARE

Judge Julius H. Miner in Circuit court yesterday denied the $196,700 claim of George Remus, former bootlegger in Cincinnati, O., against the estate of Edward J. O'Hare, Chicago liquor dealer and race track owner who was shot to death Nov. 8, 1939.

Remus claimed O'Hare owed him the money on a note purported to have been given Remus in 1923 for 891 barrels of whisky. The claim was reversed at previous trials in Probate and Circuit courts, and the retrial that ended yesterday was ordered by the Appellate court.

Judge Miner ruled that Remus' case "collapsed thru Remus' own contradictory testimony at a previous court trial in Cincinnati." The record of the Cincinnati trial showed that Remus had testified he had sold the whisky to numerous other persons.

CHICAGOAN SEES JAPS STRIKE AT PEARL HARBOR

Flies Thru Fire Aimed at Attackers.

[The author of this article, a Chicagoan, flew over Pearl Harbor in an unarmed Flying Fortress while the Japanese were making their sneak attack three years ago today. He has a record of 350 hours' combat flying and is credited with sinking a Jap cruiser. He subsequently was wounded in action and retired.]

BY LT. ERWIN F. CIHAK.
[As told to Roy Gibbons.]

We were a startled bunch of pilots as we came in over Pearl Harbor, on the island of Oahu, that sunny morning of Dec. 7, 1941.

Lt. E. F. Cihak [top] and Lt. W. R. Schick.

There we were, fresh out of the United States and a land of peace, on a run that had begun only the night before near San Francisco, Cal.

Then, without warning, our flight of 24 Flying Fortresses, comprising two squadrons assigned to the army air base at Clark field in the Philippines, was horrified by the all-pervading stench of burning cordite from anti-aircraft and high explosive ammunition.

Unreal in Memory.

The transition from peace to war came so quickly that it seems almost unreal now. But there was nothing unreal about the scream of death I heard thru the fins of Jap bombs at Pearl Harbor. There was nothing unreal in what I saw from the air and what I saw from the ground.

I saw proud ships of our mighty fleet caught like sitting ducks and smashed into blackened hulks as aerial torpedoes came hurtling from the bellies of Mitsubishi and Zero planes.

Grinning Japanese pilots, their faces gleaming yellow in the dawn sun, passed so close to me in the sky that I could see their lips apparently curled in scorn as they stared ahead.

Hit Mapped Targets Only.

So unruffled was the enemy that historic day that targets in and around Pearl Harbor which did not show on the miniature maps the Jap pilots carried around their necks were spared.

Each Japanese flyer had been given a specific objective. To gain his bearings, all the pilot had to do was pull on the map and unreel it from his neck before his eyes. If the target wasn't on his particular diagram the Jap withheld his fire. It might have been because of this unimaginative kind of preparation that our ship was not attacked when it came in to land near a mangrove thicket off one of the Hickam field runways adjoining Pearl Harbor naval base.

We on our incoming planes were bewildered. I was a bombardier cadet in the greenhouse [plastic nose] of our B-17 Fortress unarmed except for a clip or two of bullets for my service pistol stowed in my cross-country bag in the bomb bay area of the plane.

In similar bags were the service pistols of others in the crew. They were regulation .45 caliber weapons and about as effective over Pearl Harbor as a popgun might have been.

Machine Gun in Crate.

True, we had a machine gun aboard. But it was crated and in the rear of the ship. We couldn't have fired it had we had it in our hands. We had no ammunition.

In like manner, our bomb bays were empty of bombs. We were a totally unarmed armada, like so many ducks, as we came in from the sea in sight of the Hawaiian highlands behind which lay Pearl Harbor.

How did we happen to arrive just when the Japs were attacking? Perhaps the best way to answer would be to begin by telling my own history briefly.

I was born in Chicago 29 years ago, attended Lincoln grammar school, graduated from Morton high, and received a science degree at the University of Illinois. After leaving school, I was employed in the meat industry until I enlisted in May, 1941, as an aviation cadet with the army air forces.

Trained at Albuquerque.

I trained at Barksdale field, La., and Albuquerque, N. M., where I met Lt. William R. Schick, Chicago flight surgeon who was to die at the hands of a Jap strafing pilot on a Hickam field runway. At Albuquerque I served with the combat unit with which I was to remain identified until malaria and a bullet put thru a knee in fighting Feb. 23, 1942, over Rabaul, New Britain, forced me out. We were alerted at Albuquerque and told we had been assigned to the Philippines.

At Hamilton field, near San Francisco, we received our new planes and at 9:30 p. m., Dec. 6, 1941, took off for the Hawaiian Islands.

Thru Peaceful Sky.

The night passed uneventfully as we flew over the sea at approximately 160 miles an hour. Other ships of the two squadrons were strung out over the sky.

Before we took off from San Francisco word had circulated among the crews that we had been instructed to fly high over any Japanese mandated islands. It also was rumored about thru the two squadrons that we were not to fly over Pearl Harbor in our approach to Hickam field.

The navy had indicated lanes of approach for planes flying over its domain. The reason for flying high over Jap territory was to avoid giving offense to the Japs, with whom, it had been explained to us, we might expect some trouble but never war.

The weather on the morning of Dec. 7 broke clear. Our commandthe officer, Maj. Truman H. Landon, a West Pointer, who since has been promoted to brigadier general, said we were witnessing a typical Hawaiian sunrise.

Ride Radio Beam.

The Oahu radio was coming in strong. They had left the station on all night so we could "home in" on its frequency.

Just as the sun was coming up over the horizon we picked up the China Clipper, which had left San Francisco in advance of our flight.

When first we saw her the Clipper was standing out in the sky about the distance of a crow's flight from Tribune Tower to the Civic Opera building [a little more than a mile] away from us.

The Clipper had been running parallel to us, headed west. As we watched she made a right angle turn and headed due south.

The Clipper, I remember hearing our skipper remark, invariably landed at Pearl Harbor. The turn she was taking was out of her way.

Received Warning?

Later, however, we learned she had landed at Hilo, Hawaii, more than an hour's flight from Pearl Harbor. Many of us have wondered since whether the Clipper had received a warning not given to us.

As we cruised along we still were getting the Oahu radio. We had passed the Clipper while approximately 300 miles at sea.

We were about 20 miles off shore when I was first to see a flight of 16 pursuit ships possibly five miles away. I was in the greenhouse of our ship, changing from sneakers to street shoes.

I remember remarking to our navigator, Lt. Chester Budz, that I was eager to get ashore to get a chicken or duck dinner.

But I was keeping one eye on the flight of pursuits which were headed north, cutting across our due west course at right angles. Suddenly the ships made a 90 degree turn and headed east directly into our path, in a single column. Within what seemed seconds these planes were upon us.

At first we thought they were members of an American patrol out of Pearl Harbor. But later I was amazed to see a red ball instead of our own white star on their wings.

Fly Under Fortresses.

They flew directly under our left wing tip and not more than 50 or 60 feet below us. If I had had a machine gun I could have gotten them all. I could have hit them with a shoe, in fact. I expected to taste lead any minute. I crouched behind the armor plate of my seat.

Our communications officer, a Lt. McEllis, stuck his movie camera thru an opening in the ship to take some pictures, and reported some tracer bullets went by.

Now we were passing over the island of Oahu. We saw vast columns of smoke rising. Somebody remarked that the islanders must have been burning their cane fields. As for myself, just as I always do when I get to strange places, I started looking for cattle.

Almost instantly, however, when we were over the land, we saw the reality of what had happened. Wheeler field, the American pursuit base, was ablaze. We dropped to 500 feet to get a better look. The hangars were gutted. The P-40s were burning. Some were smoking.

Wing to Wing.

We later were told that the ships at Wheeler had been ordered parked wing tip to wing tip during the period the island had been placed on an alert, subsequently lifted, to enable sentries to guard them more easily.

We were informed also that all ammunition, including anti-aircraft shells, had been locked up in warehouses as a precaution against the same kind of sabotage. When the Japs came, I later was advised, it was necessary to break down the doors of those warehouses to get at the ammunition for defense.

It was then I realized the Jap pursuit ships we had passed at sea must have been returning from strafing the field or bombing Konehoe bay and probably had expended their ammunition on their way back to their carrier. Undoubtedly it was this fact alone that saved us from being shot out of the skies.

Under American Fire.

We then turned to the southwest and approached Pearl Harbor. As we came in view of the naval base the sight that met our eyes was unbelievable. Anti-aircraft bursts from our own guns were mushrooming all around us and rocking our ship.

A handful of American destroyers were churning about in frenzied efforts to avoid Jap dive bombers and torpedo planes. Our own side could not distinguish us from the enemy. We ran the same gantlet of fire as the Japs.

Eventually we landed and taxied our ship off one of the Hickam field runways to a mangrove thicket, where we took cover. One Flying Fortress, piloted by Capt. Swenson of our squadron, had landed before us and was set on fire by a Jap strafing plane which ignited the signal flares the ship was carrying.

It was in this ship that Lt. Schick, our flight surgeon, was riding. He was shot down on the runway as he climbed from the burning wreck. Other ships in our two squadrons landed at various places around the island.

See Bombers Attack.

It was about 8 a. m. when we landed. We stayed in the mangrove for about an hour and could watch the dive bombers that followed up the strafing attacks. We could see the smoke and flames rising from the Pearl Harbor basin and watch the torpedo planes move into action against our battleships moored there.

After the attack had ceased we were driven to the other side of Hickam field. There I saw the dead and dying and dismembered parts of human bodies. The barracks were afire. All was turmoil.

The record of our losses at Pearl Harbor is history. Now, three years later, I recall the place and time only as the occasion of memories I wish I might forget.

U. S. REDS HAIL BLAST AT BRITAIN BY STETTINIUS

Find Aid for Plan to Communize Europe.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Secretary of State Stettinius' rebuke to the British government for interfering in the formation of a new Italian ministry without consulting the United States was hailed by Communists and other left wingers at home and abroad today as a powerful aid to their program for communizing Europe.

They ignored the remainder of the Stettinius statement which also rebuked by implication Russian dictator Stalin for promoting Communist domination of Poland, Finland, the Baltic states, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Jugo-Slavia and instigating Communist activity in France, Italy, Belgium, and Greece.

Rebuke to Stalin, Too.

Stettinius said in his formal statement yesterday that the American government expects "the Italians to work out their problems of government along democratic lines without influence from outside. This policy would apply to an even more pronounced degree with regard to governments of united nations in their liberated territories."

This statement, tho aimed primarily at Britain in the Italian affair, is the first gesture of remonstrance against the Stalin program of soviet domination of the nations of eastern Europe. It comes at a time when the communization of eastern Europe is close to an accomplished fact, and when the communist penetration of France, Italy, Belgium and Greece has progressed to an alarming extent. Already there looms large the possibility that Europe is merely exchanging Hitler's nazi brand of totalitarianism for Stalin's communist brand of totalitarianism.

Speculate on Next Step.

What the Roosevelt administration purposes to do to make its protest effective is the subject of much speculation here and in European capitals. The President has been severely criticized for the tacit approval he gave at the Teheran conference of Stalin's plans to annex or dominate Poland, the Baltic states and the Balkan countries. His critics took him to task for not threatening Stalin with withdrawal of the billions of dollars of American lend-lease for the soviets unless he gave guarantees to respect the self-determination of small countries and their right to choose their form of government.

Stalin already had given such pledges in subscribing to the Atlantic charter and the Moscow agreement, but these have not interfered with his annexations and establishment of communist governments by coercion in the wake of his conquering armies in Poland, the Baltic states and the Balkans. The first acts of these governments has been the confiscation of property, with deportation or execution made the price of resistance to the soviet decrees.

Facts Not Clear.

In the rift between the United States and Britain in Italy the facts are not clear. British Foreign Minister Eden says he vetoed the selection of Count Sforza for foreign minister because Sforza was a trouble maker in the Bonomi ministry and that the American representative in the control council was notified of this action, tho he does not claim that Washington was consulted in advance.

The left wingers who are partisans of Sforza assert that the British government oppose him because he is a Republican and against the perpetuation of the Italian monarchy, which the British monarchy is supporting. The British government, they say, is against any movement which might weaken the monarchical principle and thereby impair the foundations of the British monarchy.

The same situation obtains, according to left wingers, in Greece, where the British government is interested in restoring King George to the throne. This Eden vigorously denies, asserting that the British government is determined to restore order in Greece and permit the people to determine their form of government.

HITLER PARALLEL SEEN IN STALIN 'APPEASEMENT'

Rep. Sumner Fears More Wars.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Rep. Sumner [R., Ill.] today called upon congress to halt the New Deal's "appeasement" of Russia, which she charged is helping the soviet union to dominate small nations in violation of the Atlantic charter.

Declaring that Stalin is being "built up" by the same appeasement policy that permitted Hitler to lead Germany into war, Miss Sumner told the house that our diplomatic subservience to Russia is only "building up more wars for America to fight."

"Rich Man's Townsend Plan."

Miss Sumner declared that pressure for continuing appeasement comes from internationalists who want the world to be governed by a new league of nations, which she termed a "rich man's Townsend plan."

In a move to halt such appeasement, she offered a bill to make it unlawful for the United States or its representatives to aid other nations in breaching the Atlantic charter principle of self-chosen governments for all nations.

Such a measure, she contended, would stop the administration from continuing to sanction Russian schemes for Communist domination of Poland, the Balkan states, and other nations.

"Stalin's rapid moves toward world domination, which he could not have made without the aid of the appeasement policy," she said, "have already reduced the level of United States security in the post-war world below the danger point."

Sees Military Danger.

"It may be unsafe during our time," Miss Sumner said, "to permit industry to reconvert to civilian production. We may have to remain mobilized indefinitely. Our glamor President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, is likely to go down in history as the man who rescued the world from the frying pan only to throw it into the fire."

Our appeasement of the soviets, Miss Sumner said, was demonstrated by concessions made to Stalin at the Moscow conference a year ago and the subsequent Teheran conference of President Roosevelt, Stalin, and Prime Minister Churchill.

"Since Teheran," she said, "it seems that there is nothing so valuable that the United States is unwilling to concede it to keep up the appearance for internationalists who insist that unity must be preserved at any cost.

"The price has included giving away things which were not ours to give, rights we had already guaranteed to other governments including Poland, Yugoslavia, and Chiang Kei-shek's government of China."

BANKERS' HEAD AIDS GLOBAL PLANS BORN OF DUMBARTON OAKS

Dispatches from New York City yesterday disclosed that W. Randolph Burgess, president of the American Bankers association, is lending his organization to a group called Americans United for World Organization, Inc., which has started a national campaign to sell the Dumbarton Oaks peace proposals to the American public.

W. R. Burgess.

In letters to affiliated banking groups thruout the country, Burgess is seeking to arrange regional conferences at which American state department representatives and so-called experts may address the financiers under auspices of the A. U. F. W. O., which is headed by Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college.

State department attaches scheduled for speaking assignments include Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins university, who was chief territorial adviser of the American peace delegation which helped formulate the peace terms of World War I.; Joseph C. Grew, ambassador to Japan until Pearl Harbor, whose name now is before the senate for confirmation as undersecretary of state, and Alger Hiss, a lawyer and state department employe.

The new organization, it is reported, will be "brain trusted" by Archibald MacLeish, poet and librarian of congress. MacLeish's name is before the senate for confirmation as an assistant secretary of state. He is said to have been chosen to preside over a great propaganda machine to influence public opinion at home and abroad in favor of various global plans by which the President and Harry Hopkins hope to extend the New Deal thruout the world.

Kelly Proclaims Tuesday as Winged Victory Day

Mayor Kelly yesterday proclaimed next Tuesday as Winged Victory day, marking the opening at the Civic Opera house of the American air forces' Winged Victory show for a five weeks' run.

CHASTE 'WIDOW' IS SUING ESTATE FOR ½ MILLION

Holds Dead Spouse's Divorce Illegal.

Mount Holly, N. J., Dec. 6 [Special].—A woman who lived 14 years in mutual self-imposed chastity with her steel magnate husband before he tired of the arrangement and divorced her opened a court fight today for his $500,000 estate.

The woman is Irene D. Cunningham, 72, of Mercerdale, Pa., who is seeking to be recognized as the rightful widow of Clement Cunningham, founder of the Crucible Steel Casting company of Lansdowne, Pa.

Holds Divorce Is Invalid.

She also is seeking to break the will which left a half million dollars to Marie Ebby Cunningham, 56, Mooretown, N. J., whom he married in 1926, nine years after he got a divorce from Irene in Yucatan, a Mexican state.

Irene contends the Mexican decree was invalid and that she was Cunningham's legal wife until he died in 1943. Her suit was an equity action in Burlington county Chancery court contesting the will.

The Cunninghams were married Dec. 4, 1895, in Philadelphia after vowing to abstain from sexual relations. Subsequent court records disclosed Cunningham asked his bride to help him keep the vow if he should weaken and she did such a good job that he left her Dec. 12, 1909.

Divorce Suits in Vain.

She brought suit for support and for the next five or six years Cunningham tried vainly in Pennsylvania courts to get a divorce on the ground of "cruel and barbarous treatment." He based his charges on his wife's refusal to accord him "conjugal rights."

The first Mrs. Cunningham said she would not have learned about the steel man's death if her monthly allowance of $140 hadn't stopped.

FOUR SUITS AND COAT STOLEN.

Joe Weiner, 3901 Pine Grove av., yesterday reported the theft of four suits and a top coat, valued at $300, from his car parked in front of 18 S. La Salle st.

Asphyxiated by fumes from a coal-coke furnace, Thomas Sybrandy, 31, and his wife, Geraldine, 26, were found dead last night in a bedroom of their home at 1000 Belvedere st., Waukegan. Police and Coroner Garfield R. Leaf said they had been dead about 14 hours. The bodies were found by Mrs. Sybrandy's father, Emil Sorensen, 47, of 912 Belvedere st., and neighbors who forced their way into the house.

SENATE DEBATES ON 'STOOGES' TO AID STETTINIUS

Nominations of 4 Sent Back to Committee.

shouted, "to have a man like that in the state department!"

Among the charges hurled by the Democrats were these:

SEN. CHANDLER [D., Ky.]—Instead of the poor people obtaining the jobs, the Wall street boys are getting them, and we are clearing everything with Harry Hopkins. . . . The Atlantic charter was a "noble declaration" by the President.

Represent Big Business.

SEN. WHEELER [D., Mont.]—Heads of all the various departments are representatives of all the big business interests in the country. They represent the Morgan interests, the Rockefeller interests, the Dillon-Read interests, and all the big corporations of the country.

Bitterness was extreme as it became apparent that the administration's hope of getting the nominees confirmed today was glimmering. Connally turned from pleading for confidence in his committee to the sarcastic assertion that he would have its proceedings "printed in English."

Connally even had some powerful Republican support, for Minority Leader White [R., Me.] pleaded in vain that the nominations not be sent back to the committee.

The Democratic revolt was led by the most dyed-in-the-wool Roosevelt leader of them all—Sen. Guffey [D., Pa.], who opened the discussion.

He Loses Enthusiasm.

He read an editorial condemning the nominees from Stern's Philadelphia Record, and announced that since reading the editorial he was not as enthusiastic about the nominations as he might have been before.

"There is no one in the whole United States," shot back Sen. Clark, "who has profited as much personally by the good will of the New Deal administration as has Mr. David Stern. . . . It comes with very poor judgment and very poor grace from Mr. Stern to oppose these nominations.

Guffey demanded how Stern had profited "unfairly or illegally."

"I do not suggest that he has profited illegally," Clark retorted. "It was all under the law. Mr. Stern was able to keep his publications floating unquestionably by the use of the loans which he received under the New Deal. . . . It comes with very poor grace indeed for Mr. Dave Stern, who would have been in bankruptcy had it not been for the assistance he received from New Deal agencies, to attack these nominations. . . .

Loans Thru Harry Hopkins.

"He would have gone into bankruptcy had it not been for certain policies of the New Deal which enabled him to receive loans under the auspices of Harry Hopkins."

"Then why pick on Mr. Stern?" asked Guffey, who has often been described as friendly to big business interests.

"His attack," said Clark, "has not been based on anything in connection with the previous service of the nominees, but it has been made because Mr. Stern was trying to be a demagog, which he has always been."

Chandler joined in the debate, explaining that he had no objection to the confirmation of Grew.

"I sometimes wonder who won the election," Chandler said, beaming on the gallery crowds. "I was told that the poor folks would be given opportunities as a result of the election, and it was said the common man would be given a chance.

Jobs for Wall Street.

"I am certain a great majority of the average citizens voted for President Roosevelt, and our Republican brethren told us during the campaign we would have to clear everything with Sidney. [Sidney Hillman.]

"Instead of poor folks obtaining jobs, the Wall street boys are getting them, and we are clearing everything with Harry Hopkins."

Clark interrupted to say that Guffey is a member of the foreign relations committee, and voted approval of the nominations in the committee.

"What happened," asked Clark, "except the editorial of Dave Stern's Philadelphia Record, to change any one's opinion about the life long career of Ambassador Grew?"

Chandler continued, explaining that he had no objection to the nominees, but objected to haste in confirming them since the senate had little information about them.

Some Questions to Ask.

"I should like to know their position with respect to India," he said. "I should like to know whether they think the Atlantic charter is dead. The people in other countries [which Chandler visited in a battle front tour] said:

"'The United States is bound by the Atlantic charter.' We cautioned them that was a noble declaration of the President of the United States and of the prime minister of England, and not to be too certain, because it was not the law of either country."

Explaining the matters of vital importance which must be decided by state department executives, Chandler went on:

"American boys are fighting and dying all over the world for democracy, the second time in a generation, and if all they are to accomplish is the securing of possessions all over the world for imperialistic powers, and returning the people in some countries to slavery when the war is over, they have not accomplished anything."

Questions Clayton's Views.

Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] rebuked new Secretary of State Stettinius for declining to tell Clayton's views on cartels of international trade agreements, or to permit Clayton to speak for himself, before Clayton takes office.

O'Mahoney protested that the senate does not know the import of the department's reorganization and that it has had no time to learn anything about the nominees.

O'Mahoney then proposed that the nominations be sent back to the committee—an action that other members said was a mandate for the committee to interview the nominees and perhaps to hold public hearings on their fitness. The committee had recommended confirmation without questioning the nominees.

Doubt About Charter.

O'Mahoney then told of doubts thruout the world as to the present status of the Atlantic charter. He submitted a copy of the charter for publication in the Congressional Record, but Chandler inquired:

"Does the senator have any information as to whether or not there ever was any Atlantic charter drawn up and signed by the President and Mr. Churchill. . . . Has the senator ever seen any signed document, or has he ever seen any one who has seen it?"

O'Mahoney said he had never inquired.

Connally begged the senate to show confidence in his committee by immediate confirmation and White joined him.

When White finished, Connally stopped pleading and announced:

"Every senator who knows the President knows that he is going to dominate the foreign policy of this government. . . . It is a long stretch of the imagination for any one to think an assistant secretary of state will be anything more than an administrative officer."

Sen. Hatch interrupted to ask if Connally would hold public hearings, if ordered to reconsider the nominees, and Connally indicated he would not.

Chandler sprang to his feet to advocate public hearings and said:

"Of course, if these nominees are going to be stooges—and the senator [Connally] has made the statement that they will not do anything—I would hate to be a party to advising and consenting to the nomination of a stooge who will not do anything when he gets there."

SEN. BANKHEAD [D., Ala.]—Will a record be kept of the committee proceedings?

CONNALLY—Yes. And we will have the proceedings printed in English.

CHANDLER—If the policy of the United States changes because of what some of these men do, we will be responsible for it. And there will be no one to hold our heads when they start aching. I do not intend to allow mine to ache.

CONNALLY—I am sure the senator's head will not give him any cause to ache because he does not worry about anything.

Responsibility Not Met.

SEN. MALONEY [D., Conn.]—The foreign relations committee has not quite met its responsibility in sending us the names of four men who did not appear before it.

Sen. Wheeler then took his fellow Democrats to task saying:

"Suppose we had a Republican administration and the name of Mr. Stettinius had been sent to us. The administration might send up the names of Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Clayton. What would we Democrats be doing? At the time Mr. Hoover sent up some names this way, the Democrats seriously questioned the appointments. We have now what is supposed to be a great liberal administration. Some one has said it was an administration of the common people or of the poor people.

"Yet we find the heads of all the various departments are representatives of all the big business interests of the country. They represent the Morgan interests, the Rockefeller interests, the Dillon-Read interests, and all the big corporations of the country.

"We are told we are not to question these nominations. As to what the nominees' views may be, we are to know nothing. I shall not vote for them until I know something about them."

SENATE ROLL CALL ON NOMINATIONS TO STATE DEPARTMENT

PLENTY OF U. S. CIGARETS SOLD IN MEXICO CITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6.—News of a cigaret shortage in the United States has surprised both local Americans and Mexican smokers of United States brands, of whom there are many thousands in this capital.

Photos of Americans lining up for cigarets have puzzled local smokers who are able to purchase unlimited supplies of the popular United States brands at large shops as well as in the smaller stores on the side streets. Cigarets cost little more than in the United States, one popular brand retailing in the United States for 18 cents selling here for from a peso, 10 centavos [about 23 cents] to one peso, 50 centavos [about 33 cents]. Top Mexican brands sell for less than half of that.

Mexicans smoke the fine brands of tobacco, including Virginia and burley types and when it comes to cigars the country yields nothing to Cuban variety, altho the Mexican brands are little known in the United States.

WFA INSPECTION OF MEAT BRINGS DOWN CRITICISM

Federal inspection of meat, transferred by executive order to the supervision of the war food administration, should be returned to the jurisdiction of the federal bureau of animal industry, according to Dr. J. M. Sutton, Sylvester, Ga., president of the United States Live Stock Sanitary association.

Speaking before the group's 48th annual meeting yesterday in the La Salle hotel, Dr. Sutton said the change in meat inspection methods is not in the public welfare, and that the service should be returned to the supervision of men especially trained for it.

Dr. R. A. Hendershott, Trenton, N. J., association secretary, said the main concern of the three-day convention is the development of uniform regulations for the interstate shipment of live stock.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

FOUNDED JUNE 10, 1847

ENTERED AS SECOND CLASS MATTER MAY 14, 1903, AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHICAGO, ILL., UNDER ACT OF MARCH 3, 1879.

All unsolicited articles, manuscripts, letters, and pictures sent to The Tribune are sent at the owner's risk, and the Tribune company expressly repudiates any liability or responsibility for their safe custody or return.

WE TOLD YOU SO.

Mr. Stettinius' first act as secretary of state was the issuance of a statement declaring that this country wishes and expects the Italian people to run their own government. The statement was accepted in London and everywhere else as a rebuke to the British foreign office, which has meddled in Italian politics to the extent of refusing to let Carlo Sforza serve as either Italian premier or foreign minister. The statement was regarded, also, as our government's disapproving comment on the bloody intervention of the British army in the Greek civil war.

What has been happening in Italy and Greece must have served to remove the scales from the eyes of many Americans who have persistently failed to see the true origins of Mr. Roosevelt's diplomacy for the last half dozen years. Mr. Roosevelt's prime purpose, at least since 1937, has been to preserve the British empire. Now that the end has been achieved at very heavy cost to us, the state department discovers that Britain is stepping out on her own to dominate as much of the world as she can, and this apparently amazes the state department. Why anybody should be amazed to find Mr. Eden behaving as British foreign ministers have behaved consistently since the 17th century is hard to answer.

There is nothing puzzling about the British resentment of Mr. Stettinius' statement. Britain did all she could to procure Mr. Roosevelt's recent reelection for him and accordingly must feel that he is an ingrate. All the professional and amateur Anglophiles in this country were found whooping it up for the fourth term in such outfits as the Independents [i. e., Republicans] for Lucas and in the Broadway campaign against Ham Fish.

What Mr. Eden may not realize, however, is that something new was added in the 1944 campaign. In previous elections Mr. Roosevelt's popularity was sufficient to enable him to win with no more Republican help than British influence could deliver to him. In those years he would, on occasion, denounce Stalin and jail Browder. That wasn't true this year. He had to rely on Stalin's following in this country, and it was the vote that the PAC gave him that put him over. This time he is more heavily indebted to Stalin than he is to Churchill and his conduct of foreign affairs since the election has shown that he knows it.

First came the pronouncement a fortnight ago that Poland's boundaries and all such European questions are no concern of ours. That was stated to be a reaffirmation of America's traditional foreign policy—a policy, be it noted, which Mr. Roosevelt tacitly abandoned when he maneuvered the country toward war and explicitly abandoned at Dumbarton Oaks. The declaration about Poland's boundaries can mean only that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to let Stalin have whatever real estate he wants in Europe and will guarantee Russia in possession of her spoils in perpetuity with American arms.

Churchill and Stalin had made a deal by which Churchill agreed to let Russia have the territories she coveted in exchange for Russian approval of British hegemony in the Mediterranean countries, notably Italy and Greece. As to them, Mr. Stettinius' declaration means that if Stalin doesn't want to stick by his bargain it's all right with us. Likewise, his communist following in France, Belgium, and Holland can take those countries as far as we are concerned. That's what the last paragraph of the statement meant in declaring that our policy of nonintervention in Italy and Greece applies "to an even more pronounced degree with regard to governments of the united nations in their liberated territories."

It remains to be seen if Stalin will accept this invitation and act on it. If he does, Europe can be expected to undergo years of torment and bloodshed, for which our policy or lack of it will be to no small extent responsible. The guilt will lie heavily upon sycophants of the New Deal, but the Republican so-called party which has persistently failed to offer the alternative of a strong American policy cannot avoid its full share of the blame.

AIRPORT AGREEMENT.

The agreement reached between the city and the eight commercial air lines using Chicago airport to proceed on construction of a new terminal building and to double existing use of the field in the future is welcome. It means that we are going to prepare for post-war realization of Chicago's position as the air capital of this country and as the focal point of routes all over the world.

A recent survey by the civil aeronautics authority showed that Chicago has more interest in air travel than any other city in the nation. While New York originated one air passenger for every 42 residents, Chicago produced an air passenger for every 39 residents. The new routes to other continents which are in prospect are certain to enhance the position the city now holds.

The air lines for a time were hesitant to enter into an agreement for improvement of the airport because they were not convinced that the runways and facilities would be adequate in the future. This has been answered in part by the fact that the field can accommodate any existing type of plane and that runways could handle a 100 per cent increase in arrivals and departures.

Whatever may prove to be desirable in the future, it is indispensable that our present landing field be as efficient as possible. Meanwhile, studies should be made to determine future needs and an energetic effort should be made to provide much speedier access to the airport by motor vehicles. A thru highway from the loop is demanded.

CONSCRIPTS TO POLICE GERMANY.

Rep. Brooks, a Louisiana Democrat who is a member of the congressional committee now touring European battlefronts, reports that the immediate post-war plan, or rather post-war hope, of all the G. I.s he has met is to shake the dust of that strife-torn continent from their shoes the minute fighting stops.

Their gravest apprehension is that they will be kept there for some years after the war, in an army of occupation. Accordingly, he argues, congress should immediately enact a peace time conscription law to provide an army of at least a million men to help police Europe.

There is little doubt that Rep. Brooks diagnoses the feelings of the overseas soldiers correctly. Virtually every other report has been to the same effect. In Europe our army is fighting bravely and competently, but its attitude is that it has a job to do which it wants to finish as quickly as possible.

What Rep. Brooks doesn't seem to gauge is the attitude of the peace time conscripts and their families. If there has been any indication that they are going to be any more willing to garrison Germany indefinitely than are the men who are now beating the Nazis, it has escaped general attention in this country.

It may be, as one of our friends asserted the other day in the Voice of the People, that a majority in this country, at the moment, wants some sort of international organization to preserve peace. This much, however, is certain. Those who embrace Dumbarton Oaks must also be prepared to embrace peace time conscription as Rep. Brooks proposes it. To accept one without the other is to indulge in the wildest kind of wishful thinking.

A SUPER WPA?

In its dying days the 78th congress has occupied itself with trying to provide the New Deal with a backlog of federal-made work projects to be embarked upon when the war is over. The house has passed a federal aid road bill calling for the expenditure of 1 billion 673 million dollars. The senate has passed a billion dollar flood control measure. Also hanging fire is a rivers and harbors bill calling for equally vast expenditures.

While Mr. Roosevelt talks about 60 million jobs after the war, his supporters in congress provide the interpretation that the country is going back to the WPA. It will be a bigger WPA, with a liberal admixture of pork, but the principle remains the same. Government is to plan the work and finance the pay rolls. Recovery remains as distant a dream as it always has been under the New Deal. The leaves to be raked will be a little bigger, that is all.

A few voices have been raised in congress against this resumption of deficit spending, but the New Deal majority has paid no heed. Rep. Frederick C. Smith of Ohio said that the approach being taken by congress is defeatist, because it shows a profound lack of faith in the ability of our enterprise system to function normally, and that made work will only encourage unemployment. "It opens the way," he said, "to unleashing the thousand and one other New Deal schemes for providing government-made work that have long been hatched out and are waiting to be sprung upon congress."

Federal works and expenditures were given a long trial by the New Deal as a means of beating the depression, and the only thing the experiment proved was that when the works were built and the money spent it was necessary to plan still more projects and appropriate still more money, for nothing had been permanently accomplished and unemployment levels were just where they were before, if not lower. The danger of these schemes was that they followed the philosophy of making government the employer and destroying the normal social function of providing employment thru private enterprise. Somebody, of course, had to pay the bill.

Heavy taxes necessary to sustain government spending are derived thru high taxes upon the private citizen and industry alike. The citizen is left with little or no savings which he can venture to invest and thus make jobs for others, and the taxes taken from industry prevent expansion which will provide new jobs. The final effect of any government spending program thus is to force a contraction of private enterprise, with a resultant loss of jobs. Either the government makes the work, in which event it is only temporary and at relatively low wages, or industry makes it, in which case it is likely to be permanent and at comparatively high wages.

At the close of the war the national debt will stand at about 300 billion dollars. The carrying charges may be about 9 billion dollars a year on a debt of this size. The federal government, even if it were much more economical than it has been under the New Deal, will probably be unable to run on less than 7 or 8 billion dollars a year. Add to these tax charges the requirements of state and municipal governments, and from 22 to 27 cents will be taken out of every earned dollar.

But the process does not end there. Every time the New Deal earmarks another billion or two for made work it cuts further into the capacity to save, which is translated into risk capital, which makes jobs, and into purchasing power, which maintains them. This is a queer way to go about providing Mr. Roosevelt's 60 million jobs, unless—and it's hardly a guess—millions upon millions of them are to be in some glorified WPA, with a permanent policy of deficit spending and a permanent depression.

SO THIS IS ART.

The current United Nations exhibition at the Art institute supplies a footnote to the slang of Australia. That country is represented by a painting of a stage coach holdup, the title of which is "Bailed Up." Stanley Johnston, this column's authority on Australian speech and custom, confirms our suspicion that the command, "bail up," is the equivalent of the American "hands up."

It is time to call attention to the fact that Vitamin Flintheart, the maudlin old actor who is having a fling in the Dick Tracy drawings, bears a close resemblance, in conduct and appearance, to John Barrymore, the "sweet prince" of the best sellers. In his last or Flintheart phase, however, Barrymore gave some off-stage performances that Dick Tracy's creator would not dare to depict.

The subject of comic strips reminds us that August Derleth, prolific author of Sauk City, Wis., is writing, among many other books, a history of this branch of newspaper illustration, which he has been studying for years. His title will be "Comics in America," and the work, Derleth's longest, is scheduled for publication more than a year hence.

* * *

No doubt Derleth will point to a German artist, Wilhelm Busch, as the forefather of American serial caricature. Busch flourished for many years as the chief illustrator of Fliegende Blätter, a German weekly that had international circulation, and his books of jingles for children, with comic drawings, were widely read in German-American families. Mention "Max and Moritz" to any old-timer with a German name and watch him grin. Busch's favorite subjects were mischievous children—and the first comic strips of wide circulation in American newspapers, "The Yellow Kid" and "The Katzenjammer Kids," also followed this line of humor.

WHO SAID "EMPTY"?

What do you mean by empty stores?
What do you mean by vacant floors?
'Tis true that little girls and boys
Will not possess so many toys;
There will not be so many packets,
And there'll be fewer smoking jackets;
There won't be many things with zippers,
And likely not so many slippers;
And fewer sticks of striped candy,
And fewer things that come in handy.
But do not say that stores are empty
Because they have not wares so tempty;
For they are full from base to steeple;

Aachen's Christmas, Old Style.

The wartorn country around Aachen is famous for two delightful confections, especially popular during the winter. One is "Aachener Printen," a honey or sirup creation, flat, oblong, about two by four inches. Wheat flour and honey are mixed several months in advance, flavored with spices, allowed to ferment in the cellar. Chopped candied fruit and granulated candy sugar are added. The luster of the brown tidbit is enhanced with liquid mastich after baking. "Printen" can easily be traced to Athens and Rome. If I had no other proof I would call on Martial, who speaks of the confectioners making "a thousand artistic things for which the industrious honey bee labors."

The other Aachen specialty is "Spekulatius," made of flour, eggs, milk, butter, sugar, and almonds. Its ancestry is harder to trace. "Spekulatius" lends itself to the reproduction of small, fancy figures cut out of the flattened dough. Both of these confections were used to decorate the Christmas tree. J. D. V.

ANOTHER YEAR.

But 'round the globe embattled men yet fight.
These soldiers need not death to learn of hell;
And those at home know anguish day and night.
On western front the rockets soar, then crash;
With dreadful sound gigantic armies clash,
While doves of peace still flutter in dismay.

How long, O Lord, need fervent prayers arise
Until our men may ground their fearful arms?
Before exultant thanks reach to the skies
That now no more are heard the dread alarms?
Grant mercy, God, that in another year
Sweet peace may come, and long surcease from fear.

Are there any military or naval programs open in which I might receive some training in my field which would be given recognition for college credit later?"

The navy's radar program should be attractive to you because you will receive up to 10 months of college accredited training in an important and critical segment of your general field. Persons who take the qualifying examination [Eddy aptitude test] and are certified as acceptable are earmarked for the navy upon induction. It isn't necessary, however, for a candidate to have had any college training. If he has had a fairly good background in high school mathematics, physics, and shop work, he should have little difficulty passing the Eddy test and be qualified. The test may be taken at any navy recruiting station or at 321 Plymouth ct., Chicago. Young men in high school who expect to be drafted upon graduation or before they are graduated are urged to take the qualifying tests while the quotas still are open.

NOTE: Enlistment in the navy seabees for men 18 to 50½ years of age has just been opened in a dozen or more billets. Apply nearest recruiting office.

DON'T COUGH UNLESS YOU MUST.

A GOODLY percentage of coughers have become so from pure habit. They have adopted the custom, in modified form, from the mannerisms of the stage butler. The explosion merely means, "I am here," or "Attention, please." Now and then, the maneuver is born of hysteria. It is an antidote for embarrassment.

But there are many real reasons. The chronic performer who awakens in the morning, indulges in a paroxysm, who has another after breakfast, who repeats the episode on the way to the office and during the day—will do well to investigate the bronchial passages. The source of irritation may be found in the larynx. If so, the vocal cords will be swollen. At the same time, hoarseness will come and go. If considerable sputum is raised, however, we must anticipate a severe irritation within the branches of the bronchial tree.

What brings on the desire to "bark?" The reflex stimulus can start almost anywhere along the air passages. But no matter where the impulse arises, the diaphragm contracts forcefully. It is this latter structure which determines the loudness of the sound and the power of the blast. With most of us, the effort of the bronchi to expel mucus, whips this sticky material upward until it accumulates in sufficient quantities to bring on the outburst. There is an obstruction along the exit and we endeavor to expel it.

There is such a thing as a heart cough and, if the organ is enlarged it may be responsible for pressure. If it is not pumping blood with its usual efficiency, congestion may ensue with engorgement of the air sacs.

As local irritants we must include smoke, dust, and pungent gases. Furthermore, bacteria may disturb the mucous lining of the respiratory apparatus whereupon inflammation, swelling, and a profuse outflow of phlegm may be expected. We will then have excuse enough for the symptom.

Treatment, of course, depends upon the cause. A sedative plus self-control will handle the manifestation if it has a nervous basis. One can get out of the habit, the same way he got into it, by doing away with apprehension. Allergy must not be forgotten as a possible "starter." A search may need to be made for the offender. If tobacco is to blame, it is only common sense to give it up or reduce the quantity.

If the seizures are dry and slightly painful, patients should be given large portions of fluids, be permitted to breathe medicated steam, and to use a remedy which contains ammonium chloride, potassium iodide, or any other drug designed to liquefy the secretions. The reason we condone lozenges and sirups is because they are soothing.

But the very act may be harmful and we endeavor to ease the inflamed area by limiting the number of unnecessary "woofs." We rarely fear pneumonia when the cough is loose and bubbly. Too frequent bouts often lead to permanent overstretching of the finer bronchi—bronchiectasis.

HARDENED ARTERIES.

J. P. writes: I have a relative who is suffering from what I was told to be calcium deposits in the veins affecting the brain. Is this possible?

REPLY.

This is probably arteriosclerosis—hardening of the arteries. In this condition, the vessels become brittle and reduced in caliber. In other words, they are not able to transport the normal quota of blood.

PUS IN PLEURAL AREA.

F. P. writes: Where does all the pus come from when a person has empyema?

REPLY.

Pus cells are derived from the blood. This explains why abscesses should be drained and encouraged to heal, as the very existence of infection saps strength and vitality.

The Sum of It.

It is difficult, looking back, to believe that three years have elapsed since that quiet Sunday afternoon when the telephone rang and some one said, "Tune in your radio. The Japs have attacked us at Pearl Harbor!", for horror is swift in its development and spins a vicious spiral. But the years are long and slow—". . . like great black oxen trudge along, and God the weary herdsman goads them on"—and become a gasping unreality when you try to retrace them. Then you recall those many farewells, those various D-days that each became a mental year to mock man-made conception of time, and all those you knew and loved that Dec. 7 of 1941 who will never be back.

There were some who always said it would be a long war, but there were few three years ago who could fathom what a 50,000 mile supply line meant in time and anguish and men, or the width of the great Pacific, or the strategic possibilities of Alaska or Truk or Iceland or India; few who had even dreamed of the hump over the Himalayas and the inconceivable obstacle it would be [and we would overcome], or that of all the Normandy coastline one little bit [which our brothers and husbands and sons were to know bitterly as Omaha beach] would not be impregnable, or of all the ridges the world over to which American fighters would give the starkly realistic name of Bloody Ridge. Nor did we dream then that we would have to slip back in the Philippines the back way. We did not dream then that we would ever be driven out of the Philippines. And only an esoteric and scholarly few of us had ever heard of such places as Tarawa and Saipan and Buna, of Acra and Karachi and Tobruk, and a desolate hole in the Persian gulf called Basra. Yet all now forever must be as American, altho presumably we will never so label them, as our brothers and our blood that lie beneath their coral and sand and thick black loam.

Back in 1941 we knew the bazooka only as something in a comic strip. We did not know how many of us were to know it as a deadly, tank-piercing instrument, a comfort and a friend.

We had never imagined as mighty a plane as the B-17, yet we came to know it familiarly, and when it was followed by one twice as mighty, the B-29, we simply took it for granted.

We had no possible conception of the ally we would find in the rocket or penicillin or dehydrated eggs or atabrine or caudal anesthesia or a water distilling apparatus on a raft.

We had never dreamed that malaria, confined to our southern swamps and bayous, was to prove an enemy as deadly as the axis and one encircling the globe and that in three years we would have it, too, panting.

We had never dreamed of 50,000 planes a year [or in 10 years] or of farm wives operating 400 acre farms singlehanded or of split shifts in a little factory that once made buttonhooks.

We had never dreamed our small boys would call themselves Gen. MacArthur or Gen. Eisenhower or go around saying "ack-ack" and "Roger!" or would dig foxholes [we had never given a second thought to foxholes].

We had never dreamed the American woman could so quickly reconcile her silk-accustomed legs to rayon stockings, or that young girls would replace conductors on suburban trains, or that soybeans were palatable.

We had never dreamed that so many men at war would put their thoughts into poetry or the day after participating in an invasion could write home tranquilly to ask for a book on higher calculus or how their dogs were.

We had never dreamed, those of us who had never been thru a previous war, of the anguish and strength and courage of mothers.

Do you suppose the ringing of the spirit resounds so clearly only in times of distress?

MR. GREEN IRKED HIM.

FRANCE, Nov. 23.—I've just been wounded in action and have seen the things the American soldier, especially the infantry, is going thru. It is plain hell! After fighting these German madmen for months it's a sad thing to pick up a paper and read what is taking place in our country.

The speech the head of the A. F. L. made the other day talking in New Orleans . . . "the army of production who also have been sharing the sacrifices of war because more men have been injured and killed in the workshops, mills, mines, and factories than on the battlefields."

Is he kidding? Does he want to trade jobs?

I don't know what you people at home are being told about our losses over here, but judging from the statement by Mr. Green he must think we are cutting our way thru the Westwall with ease. The Germans aren't shooting paper out of those 88s and machine guns. Of course, the workers on the home front are doing a good job, why not? If I was getting the pay they were, and living in the United States with my wife, and eating three meals a day, I'd do a good job, too.

It's a sad day when the leader of the American army has to beg the people of the United States to keep up the sagging production. It's a sad day when the soldiers over here have to do without things because of the lack of work at home, and, brother, it will be a sad day when we get home, but not for us!

THANKSGIVING IN NEW GUINEA.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—With all the talk that went on before Thanksgiving, many people were wondering if our boys overseas would really have turkey. This is what my husband, stationed in New Guinea, wrote: "I certainly am full of food. We had a wonderful Thanksgiving dinner. It consisted of shrimp cocktail, turkey with dressing, sweet potatoes, peas, cranberry sauce, hot rolls, ice cream, and raisin pie, and chocolate toddy. To top it off, we got two packs of cigarets and two cigars."

I know that boys all over the world didn't have a meal like that, but it should do our hearts good to know that our boys weren't forgotten completely.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Isn't it odd that so many of the CIO strikes are "unauthorized"? With the repeated no strike pledge given by the white-haired boys of the New Deal administration, it must be a source of great grief to the hearts of Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman to note the rebellious acts of their pupils. Or, are these "unauthorized" strikes just a part of the Communists' scheme to create confusion and keep the political servants of the CIO on the hot seat?

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 2.—I see that packages now may be mailed from here to Free France. Before our government makes this possible, why not see that packages mailed to American soldiers overseas reach them? My brother, a veteran of the African, Sicilian, and Italian campaigns, who now is with the 7th army near the Belfort gap, has requested many articles he needs during the last nine months. Fully 14 packages have been sent him. He has received none. A boy in his company whose family mailed him a carton of cigarets every week for 35 weeks received one carton. He believes the APO clerks are rifling the mail. Can't something be done about this?

INDIGNANT SIS.

DON'T WORRY, HE'LL RUN.

New Castle, Ind., Dec. 1.—In looking to 1948, may I suggest it would clear the air if we could liquidate newspaper men who travel the southland each four years and write reams about the "revolt" in Dixie. Anybody should know by now that the chevaliers of defunct Dixie are going to gripe and rattle their New Deal chains until about Nov. 1, 1948, when they will all march to the polls like good little boys.

Another one I would like to see liquidated is the newspaper man in the White House press conference who feeds Mr. Roosevelt that ancient and smelly wheeze, "Are you going to run again, Mr. President?" Any one who uses his skull for other purposes than to give employment to workers in hat factories ought to know by this time that Mr. Roosevelt is going to run in 1948.

20 NATIONS GET SEATS ON WORLD AVIATION BOARD

Place Left for Russia If She Wants It.

BY FRANK HUGHES.

An executive assembly of the international civil aviation conference yesterday filled 20 of the 21 seats on an interim council, appointed to direct the temporary world aviation organization it has established, leaving a place open for Russia, which declined to be represented in the deliberations.

The conference of 54 allied and neutral nations thus wound up its work, except for formal signing of documents and a formal leave taking session which will be held in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel this morning. The meeting convened in the Stevens Nov. 1.

Russia Can Join.

The first group of nations selected for interim council representation included the United States, the United Kingdom, France, the Netherlands, Brazil, Mexico, and Belgium. Russia can be added to this group if she wants to come in. These nations, according to the organization's covenant, represent those "of chief importance in air transport."

The second group of nations is supposed to include those not previously chosen which provide the largest "facilities for international civil air navigation." Selected in this group were Canada, Cuba, Norway, Iraq, and Peru.

The third group includes those not previously chosen which will "insure that all major geographical areas of the world are represented." In this group are China, Australia, Egypt, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, El Salvador, Chile, and Colombia.

Several Agreements Made.

The men who will represent these nations in the interim council meetings will be named by the various governments and may not necessarily be the chairmen of the delegations present here. The interim council will elect a president, presumably at its first meeting.

The air conference has produced an interim world aviation organization, a treaty setting up a permanent organization of the same type, two air transport agreements—one giving freedom to fly and land for nontraffic purposes, and the other granting complete commercial freedom of the air—and two other drafts, one a "technical annex" and the other a "final act," which contains several resolutions and a list of delegates and committees.

All of these will be open for signature tomorrow morning and again in Washington after the conference has adjourned. The world organization documents will have to be signed by 26 nations before they become effective.

CONTRACTS LET FOR BUYING NEW FIRE EQUIPMENT

Fire Commissioner Corrigan said yesterday that contracts have been let for two new fire engines capable of pumping 1,000 gallons of water a minute, for a total of $27,100, and for two new hook and ladder vehicles at $40,200. The contracts went to Peter Pirsch & Sons company.

He also said the department estimate submitted to the city controler contains an item of $275,000 for the purchase of additional equipment next year to replace outmoded equipment. If the money can be obtained, he said, the purchases will include new engines, hook and ladder trucks, a water tower and automobiles for division marshals and battalion chiefs.

Corrigan also has requested the purchase of two new fire boats at $134,000 each. He said the city now has only one fire boat, the Fred A. Busse, in operation.

U. S. TO FINANCE YOUTHS' FLYING AFTER WAR ENDS

Seeks to Keep Strong Air Industry.

BY CARL WIEGMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 6.—The Federal government plans to finance flying lessons for the youth of America after the war as part of the program to maintain a strong aviation industry. This promise was made today by William A. M. Burden, assistant secretary of commerce in a speech read for him by his assistant, George Burgess, before the national aviation trades association.

While the war has produced hundreds of thousands of military pilots, it has provided no continuing mechanism to train flyers, Burden said.

Nonprofit Schools.

"Federal aid to pilot training is a necessary part of a well balanced civil aviation program which can contribute greatly to strengthening our national economy and insuring the future security of our country," he explained.

Under the proposed program, Burden said, the government would finance only elementary courses, paying about $270 for each young man or woman who qualified for a private pilot certificate. Contracts to give the flying lessons would be made with nonprofit educational institutions of college grade, which could operate their own flying schools or could sublet the contracts to approved private flying schools.

Admits Red Tape.

Burden said the civil aeronautics board is aware of the need for simplifying rules governing private flying—a sore point at all aviation industry meetings. He listed the following rules changes which are under consideration:

Dropping the pre-war requirement that a private owner must have his plane checked annually by a CAA inspector. Instead, a certificated mechanic would make the annual examination.

Drop the rule requiring pilots to log all flights, making this procedure obligatory only for flight time required for certificates and pilot ratings.

Permit private pilots to make minor repairs instead of having all work done by a licensed mechanic.

NEW U. S. AIR GOLIATHS MAY DWARF B-29S

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—At a time when B-29s are pouring destruction on Tokyo, secret tests are under way on new air giants that may dwarf the performance of the Super Forts.

Among them is the B-36, described by one official as "the largest airplane that has been attempted in this country."

Testimony before the house appropriations committee, made public today, lifts an edge of the curtain of secrecy which shrouds this country's constant development of new air weapons.

Dr. George W. Lewis, research director of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, made brief mention in his testimony on work on the B-35, the B-36, and the B-42, all undergoing tests.

For the last year, he disclosed, one wind tunnel at Langley field, Va., has been devoted to tests on the B-35s and B-36s.

A $7,401,000 supplemental fund for research work for Dr. Lewis' committee was approved today by the committee.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK

Post Bellum!

This recorder has received a copy of a letter addressed by the chairman of the board of this company, Schenley Distillers Corporation, to its president, vice-president in charge of production and vice-president in charge of sales. His letter states in part:

* * * * *

"Our first obligation is to give the returning veteran who left his job with Schenley to join the Armed Forces, full opportunity of reemployment with the company. Our next obligation is to give every returning war veteran every possible opportunity of employment with Schenley consistent with fulfillment of our responsibility to present employees of other than war replacement status.

"Every available position should be earmarked for the returning veteran, whether it is in Sales, Production, Research, New Products, Office—the entire gamut of our business.

"When this tragedy of war is over . . . it should be the aim of Schenley, in its every component part, to be staffed by veterans in every possible position, so that this company will be an organization willing to give veterans every possible, true opportunity.

"I would like to see a policy adopted which accords with the foregoing for the guidance of the entire Schenley company. This policy should be so broad, so human, so attuned to the times, that it will merit the respect of everyone in our present organization, of the returning veteran, of the Government, and of the public, and gain happiness for us, through its accomplishment."

GRABER ENTERS JAIL ORDER FOR 2 ON POLICE BOARD

Kelly Backs Commission as Appeal Is Studied.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

Corporation Counsel Hodes failed yesterday in an attempt to save Civil Service Commissioners Walter L. Gregory and William F. Clarke from a fine and 30 day jail sentence in a contempt of court case arising from the discharge of Police Capt. Thomas Harrison. What to do next, Hodes said, has not been determined.

Judge Joseph A. Graber of the Superior court entered an order fining the commissioners $2,500 each and committing them to jail. He gave them an alternative which in effect would bring about the immediate restoration to duty of Capt. Harrison and six other police captains fired last June. Either that or appeal was the choice, Hodes admitted, and he indicated there might be an appeal.

Kelly to Back Commission.

Mayor Kelly, who appointed the present city civil service commissioners after their predecessors had been censored for not having fired a police captain accused of gambling enforcement laxity, said he would stand behind Gregory and Clarke.

"We will back the civil service commissioners all the way thru," Mayor Kelly announced. "If the present ruling [of Judge Graber] stands, the civil service commission will be powerless."

Hodes appeared before Judge Graber with a request that the ruling of Tuesday concerning the fines and jail sentences be delayed and the matter reopened. This Judge Graber refused to do. He gave the city 10 days to decide if it will appeal.

"The two commissioners admitted on the witness stand in this court yesterday that they signed a false certificate which was presented to this court," the judge said. "They said they signed it knowingly."

More Citations Sought.

A contempt citation against the commissioners has been asked in behalf of Lt. William Drury. An additional citation is to be asked tomorrow in behalf of Capt. Louis Klatzco.

Atty. Walter Tinsley, who represents Capt. Harrison, and Atty. Michael F. Ryan, representing Capt. Healy and the others in an advisory capacity, said they will accept no compromise. The police captains theoretically were fired because they followed custom in failing to make certain clerical records, the lawyers said. The civil service commission maintained the ouster was ordered because gambling had not been suppressed.

DORSEY LAWYER CHARGES HALL WITH PERJURY

Judge to Rule Today on Dismissal.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6 (AP).—Conceding its witnesses had told conflicting stories in their testimony, the district attorney's office formally joined the defense today in asking that charges of assault against Bandleader Tommy Dorsey be dismissed.

At the conclusion of arguments Superior Judge Arthur Crum took the motion to dismiss the charges under advisement and said he would give his decision at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

"I agree that it is a very peculiar situation when the district attorney has to ask for a dismissal because he can't believe his own witnesses," said Edwin Myers, deputy district attorney, in supporting the defense motion.

Hall Was Confused.

Judge Crum asked why no representative of the district attorney's office had pointed out discrepancies in testimony to the grand jury which returned the indictment. Myers said he was not sure whether that had been done, but that Actor Jon Hall, complaining witness, had explained differences by saying he was confused because of his injuries when he made his first statement.

Myers said that not only had Hall and Antonio Icaza, another state witness, contradicted themselves, but that he thought Miss Jane Churchill and Jesus Castillon, others who testified of the fight between Dorsey and Hall last August, were not reliable witnesses.

Defense Charges Perjury.

Thruout its arguments, the defense pounded away on the theory that Hall and Icaza, the state's star witnesses, perjured themselves for prospective personal gain.

Clore Warne, associate counsel for Dorsey, asked a directed verdict of acquittal and told Judge Crum that neither Hall nor Icaza could be believed in their varying accounts of the shenanigans last August in Dorsey's apartment.

The defense also is asking dismissal of the action. If dismissed, the action could be brought again. Accused with Dorsey are his wife, Pat Dane, and Sportsman Allen Smiley.

Sale of 1945 State Auto Tags Delayed to Dec. 26

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 6 (AP).—Distribution of orange and black Illinois motor vehicle license plates for 1945 was postponed today until Dec. 26. First over-counter sales had been scheduled for Dec. 15, but they will be held up until after Christmas along with mailings of the tags, the secretary of state's office said. Mail distribution customarily is delayed to avoid the holiday rush.

DRIVE TO KEEP TOO YOUNG FROM TAVERNS BEGUN

Tavern owners of Waukegan and North Chicago, at a joint meeting in Waukegan yesterday, voted to start a public relations campaign in the two cities.

The campaign will discourage even the presence in taverns of persons of less than legal age, to whom it is forbidden by law to sell drinks. It will be carried on by means of newspaper advertisments in Waukegan and North Chicago.

State's Atty. Harry A. Hall of Lake county, Mayor Frank G. Wallin of Waukegan, and Chief of Police Jacob Novak of North Chicago complimented the tavern owners on their record of law observance.

CONGRESS ASKED TO APPROPRIATE 415 MILLION MORE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—The 78th congress received its final appropriation bill today—a $415,324,712 measure supplementing funds already provided for miscellaneous agencies.

If enacted as recommended by the house appropriations committee it would boost to an estimated 68 billion dollars the new funds voted by congress this year.

Over half the new bill's total, $286,626,582, was earmarked for the navy, whose high ranking officers disclosed that tests are under way on new sky giants that may dwarf in size the big B-29 Super Fortresses.

LEGION COUNCIL URGES SIGNING OF PENSION BILL

Members of the Cook county council of the American Legion adopted a resolution at their regular meeting last night urging the President to sign the widows and orphans' pension bill for World War I. The council also recommended congressional action to open federal project homes to pensioned, disabled veterans of World War II. Elliodor Libonati, Americanization officer of the council, cited the case of a Guadalcanal veteran, blinded in both eyes by Jap fire, who was denied a project apartment because his monthly pension places him above the income level of renters in the project.

TRANSIT MERGER ATTORNEY FEES ARE AUTHORIZED

Judge Michael L. Igoe of the federal District court yesterday authorized the payment of fees to four attorneys who represented the court and the Chicago Surface Lines investors in negotiating for a unification of that property and the elevated system. The amounts ordered were: William P. Sidley, $7,050; Francis X. Busch, $9,460; Henry F. Tenney, $8,460, and William J. Friedman, $11,755. The attorneys completed their work as a court committee in October, when the surface lines were placed in bankruptcy.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by James F. McIntyre, St. Patrick, Mo.]

THE QUESTION.

WHERE ASKED.

Palmer House arcade.

THE ANSWERS.

Seaman 2d Class Boyd Allen, Akron, O.—When I was in high school we boys all wore big bow ties. They were called butterfly ties and were twice as large as any bow tie today. We wore caps as ridiculous as the ties — they had a tiny bill and the top of the hat bulged far out over the bill. That was the style, so we wore them.

Connie Fencil, receptionist, 2532 Euclid, Berwyn—G. I. hair cuts are common now for men but there was a time when I had one. A group of us cut our hair short on top and let the rest hang down long. It looked horrible but we got used to it and any one who didn't have that kind of a hair-do was out of the crowd.

Seaman 2d Class Hugh Kopp, Maplewood, Mo. — The present day fad of Sloppy Joe sweaters and dirty saddle shoes and moccasins is the most ridiculous I ever saw. I don't think you can tell what a person really looks like when he is dressed in such a shabby rig as sloppy shoes, sox, and sweaters. I prefer neater dress.

Madge Ehlebracht, typist, 7036 Elizabeth st.—Remember when the girls were plucking out their eyebrows and painting them on in a fine line? I was one of those foolish girls who followed the crowd. The sad part of it is mine never did grow back and I still have to paint them on. I'm conscious of it every day.

Marie Keating, typist, 1210 W. 100th pl.—Red knee sox, short skirts, and long plaid shirts—I actually wore something like that. I can recall what a sensation it caused at first. We wore our skirts so short and our shirts so long it looked as if all we had on was a shirt with nothing under it. There was nothing dressy about them.

Mrs. Martin Altman, housewife, 7036 Elizabeth st.—We used to spend hours poking cotton covered match sticks into our chins and cheeks trying to make dimples. Another foolish fad that went along with the dimples was beauty spots. All the movie stars had them so naturally we wanted spots, too. We had to be in style.

EDWIN HIRSCH DIVORCE SETS UP $140,000 TRUST

Judge Joseph Sabath in Superior court yesterday signed a divorce decree for Mrs. Jayne Franklin Hirsch, 32, of 1235 Madison pk., who charged her husband, Edwin, 38, an army lieutenant in Maryland, with cruelty. In civilian life he was a picture frame manufacturer. They were married in 1927 and separated in 1942. Atty. David J. A. Hayes, representing Lt. Hirsch, and Atty. Benjamin B. Davis for Mrs. Hirsch, said Mrs. Hirsch received a cash settlement, in addition to $500 a month for two children, Edwin F., 13, and Carlyn, 9, and a trust fund of $140,000 is to be administered for their benefit.

IOWA BOY NETS $5,655 ON TEDDY, CHAMPION STEER

BY GAIL COMPTON.

Ben Greve, 17, of Bryant, Ia., last January paid $91 for a Hereford steer calf in New Mexico. Back at his farm it cost Ben 20 cents a pound to bring the calf, named Teddy, from 650 pounds to 1,170 pounds, or $104.

With an investment totaling $195, Ben came to the Chicago Market Fat Stock show, where his steer was adjudged grand champion. Yesterday it was bought at auction by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, Akron, O., for $4.50 a pound, which means the check for $5,265 from the tire company, plus $585 in prize money he earned by carrying Teddy thru to the grand championship, will net Ben a profit of $5,655. The steer's sale price was a 15 year record.

Another record was set when the grand champion carload of 15 lightweight Hereford cattle of Karl Hoffman, Ida Grove, Ia., and Robert Storz, Omaha, Neb., sold for $59 a hundred pounds. Hoffman will receive a check for $8,248.20 for his prize winners.

OPA Rules Swine Price.

The champion carload of swine was held to the office of price administration limit of $14.75 a hundred. The champion carload of sheep, shown by W. J. Brodie of Stouffville, Ont., went for $23 a hundredweight.

The grand champion carload of feeder cattle, Aberdeen-Angus steers, sold for $21 a hundredweight. This price was topped when the champion load of Hereford feeders went for $21.75 a hundredweight. A third place heifer load sold for $22.25.

Best group of three steers shown by an Illinois county—Menard county, animals exhibited by Otto Winkleman Jr., Petersburg, Robert C. Wagoner and David G. Wagoner, Greenview.

Best group of three steers shown by an Iowa county—Ida county, animals exhibited by Sarah Hoffman, Howard and Mildred Johnson, all of Ida Grove.

Best group of three steers shown by an Indiana county—Tippecanoe county, animals exhibited by Jim Haller, Lafayette, and two by John C. Ralston Jr., Monte Morencl.

4-H Congress Ends.

Today the 4-H club youngsters will realize their profits when their animals are sold at auction. The highest steer price of the day is expected to go to the show's reserve grand champion shown by T. Richard Lacy, 18, of Kansas, Ill.

Representatives from every part of the United States closed the 4-H club national congress yesterday in the Stevens hotel with a dress revue, the announcement of winners in dairy production and rural landscaping, and an impromptu party for a 4-H club national winner in 1936, who hadn't seen her soldier husband in nine months.

Mrs. Marie Barr of Portland, Ore., who was attending the congress and the 10th annual reunion of national food preparation contest winners, was joined unexpectedly Thursday night by her corporal husband, a radio operator at the Malden [Mo.] army air base, who received a special furlough.

Unique Handbag, Pocketbook.

Previously, teen age club members displayed their latest dress and accessory creations, which ranged from an oatmeal box pocketbook to a complete outfit fashioned from flour sacks and feed sacks.

Joyce Mooers, 15, of Skamokaway, Wash., shot a deer last winter and used the hide to make a unique handbag which won for her the trip to Chicago and the contest ribbon from her state. Ellen Werner, freshman at the University of Minnesota, turned half of an oatmeal box into a pocketbook to match her Kelly green wool dress.

Mabel Huett of England, Ark., displayed a bolero, skirt, blouse, Dutch hat and handbag—made from flour sacks.

Eight rural landscape winners, representing top winners from 23 states, included Florence M. Klammer, 18, of Mankato, Minn.; Roland W. Giese, 17, of Loganville, Wis.; Richard Krenz, 18, of Silverton, Ore.; Emily Schwarz, 16, of Newport, R. I.; Lilly C. Cook, 17, of Milan, Ga.; Virginia C. Seedorf, 15, of Hitchcock, Okla.; Jacqueline Womble, 15, of Nashville, N. C., and Bobbie N. Duncan, 15, of Falkner, Miss.

Dairy production winners, each of whom received a $200 scholarship from the Kraft Cheese company, were Donald Stoxen, 20, of Hampshire, Ill.; Frances Coman, 16, of Tempe, Ariz.; Dorothy Carr, 20, of Creston, Mont.; Ralph E. Cope Jr., 18, of Langlois, Ore.; Gene McLean, 17, of Cornersville, Tenn., and Arby Rowley Swift, 20, of Cuba, N. Y.

Dead Soldier's Silver Star to Be Received by Mother

A silver star awarded posthumously to Pvt. Norman D. Conn, 21, who lived at 352 S. Washington av., Kankakee, will be presented today to his mother, Mrs. Christine Haynes, at the Elwood ordnance plant, Will county, where she is employed. Pvt. Conn was killed in action in Italy. Lt. Col. F. E. Swanson, adjutant of the 3d district of the 6th service command, will make the presentation.

BELIEVES FARM, INDUSTRY, LABOR WILL YET AGREE

The belief that leaders of industry, agriculture, and labor can provide a satisfactory answer to their common problems was expressed yesterday by Edward O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, before the convention of the National Association of County Agricultural agents in the Morrison hotel.

"I am confident," he said, "that an equitable adjustment of the differences between these groups can be devised. The welfare of each rests upon the health of the others, and bickering and name calling serve no good purpose."

M. L. Wilson, director of extension service, United States department of agriculture, told the county agents their work will become more important in the post-war period when a "back to the land" movement will occur. He said many industrial workers, uninformed on agricultural subjects, will be virtual wards of trained agents until they learn farm practices. He also said an immediate problem of agriculture is the improvement of marketing processes, which have not advanced as rapidly as other aspects of agriculture.

CIVIL LIBERTIES GROUP AWAITING HEARING ON ROW

National Organization May Drop Chicago Unit.

Members of the Chicago Civil Liberties committee, reported in turmoil over the joint resignation on Monday of five board members, yesterday awaited the arrival in Chicago of Roger Baldwin, national director of the American Civil Liberties union. He is expected Tuesday and will preside over a grievance meeting which Ira H. Latimer, executive secretary of the committee, acknowledged may terminate in the national organization's casting off the Chicago group.

Friction between two factions within the Chicago committee has been generating for a year, Latimer disclosed, and said matters came to a head when the five directors quit after charging the committee with partisanship.

Five Resign from Board.

Those who resigned are John B. Foley, co-chairman; Dr. John Lapp, Robert E. Drake, Charles Liebman, and Mrs. Esther Mohr, an attorney.

Reliable sources asserted the resignations were prompted in part by the committee's alleged inertia and "default" in coming to the assistance of individuals and causes opposed to the Roosevelt administration.

One of the resigned directors, who requested that his name be withheld, said considerable bad feeling was created when Latimer failed to delete partisan lines from a skit called "The Band Wagon Musical Review," staged by the committee in Orchestra hall, Oct. 23. The play extolled the Roosevelt administration and lampooned Gov. Dewey, the Republican nominee for President.

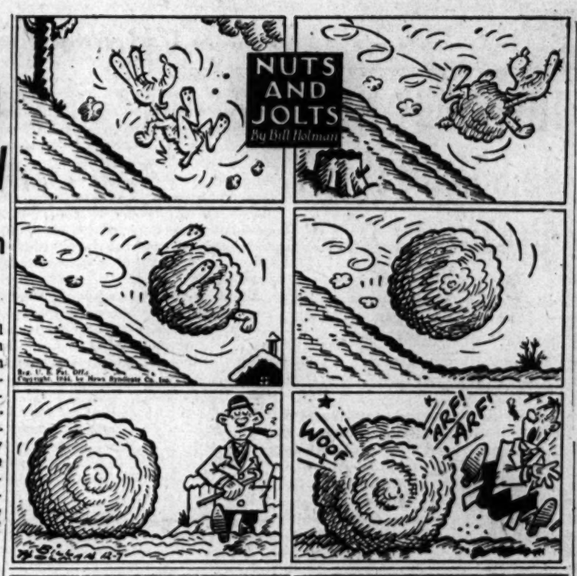
Denies Partisanship Charge.

Another director, Charles P. Schwartz, an attorney, who is continuing on the board, denied that New Deal partisanship has disrupted the organization's membership. He said internal strife can be ascribed to outside pressure toward expanding the committee's operations into the fields of economics and social problems instead of "hewing to the line" of civil liberties.

Latimer said that if Baldwin at the meeting next week decides to cast the local committee loose he could not predict what the committee's directors will do. "But judging from their past conduct," he said, "I believe they will vote to sever the informal affiliation now existing between us."

Yank and Girl Dancer Will Go on Trial Jan. 9

FELTHAM, England, Dec. 6 (AP).—Karl Holten, 22, Cambridge, Mass., parachute trooper, and Elizabeth Jones, 18, a strip-tease dancer, were bound over for trial on Jan. 9 at Old Bailey today on charges of having murdered a taxicab driver in a robbery.



WAR BOND DRIVE SEARS THIS DAY ON THE MEMORY

Pearl Harbor Slogan Seeks Record Sale.

"Remember Pearl Harbor" is the slogan of the sixth war loan drive as it seeks to observe the third anniversary of the Pearl Harbor tragedy today with record war bond sales.

Thousands of retail sales people offer bonds in areas thruout the city. Some loop department stores have given employes the day off, with pay, to sell bonds outside the stores.

16 Gold Star Mothers.

Sixteen gold star mothers of the American Bataan Clan of Maywood will be among the several hundred members of the group who will be present at Treasury Center, 72 W. Adams st.

A. C. McArthur, president of the clan, will talk on the significance of the day and the need for extra war bond buying now.

Motion picture theaters thruout the city and Cook county are cooperating in a plan to give free admission to persons who purchase bonds.

Francis M. Knight, chairman of the city and county drive, announced yesterday that the total bond buying in the sixth war loan drive stood at $596,784,000 in this area on Monday. This is 71.3 per cent of the quota for Chicago and Cook county.

Sales Stand at 47.1 Pct.

Individual sales stood at $111,033,000, or 47.1 per cent of the quota. Knight pointed out, however, that sales of E bonds had reached only 36.6 per cent, and urged increased emphasis on the sales of these "people's bonds."

One of today's bond purchasers will be Patricia Jean Hearn, 1307 E. 71st pl., who was born on the day the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor.

CLOSE A VICTIM OF AIR 'TERROR,' WOODRUFF SAYS

The "persecution" and "terrorism," Woodruff declared in a house speech, are aimed at those in the press and radio "who will not bend the knee to the administration."

"We are failing to recognize the destruction of free speech and a free press as it creeps upon us," he said, citing the removal from the air of Upton Close, commentator.

WARN GAS MEN FAKE COUPONS WILL CUT STOCK

Gasoline station dealers were warned yesterday that any counterfeit coupons they turn in to suppliers will reduce their inventories by that many gallons of gasoline, an announcement by Rae E. Walters, regional price administrator, said.

Tightening control over gas rationing, the OPA is shifting coupon verification from 15 district offices to the regional verification center, Walters said. All coupons turned in by service stations will be scrutinized for counterfeit, out of date, not yet valid, and improperly indorsed coupons, he added.

Coupons found invalid for any reason at the regional verification center will require the dealer who submitted them to make the resulting debit good with valid coupons.

Merchants who assemble Christmas tree lighting sets may sell them at no more than the aggregate retail prices for the parts, the office of price administration said yesterday. No new sets are being made.

Nearly 77,000 cases of canned green and string beans were offered for sale yesterday to the firms which canned them. If not bought by them, the beans will be offered to other canners and retailers. They came from surplus government stocks.

The OPA's fuel oil index yesterday stood at 19 per cent in Chicago—the amount of their season's supply householders may have safely burned to leave adequate supplies for the rest of the winter.

Predicting Radio Weather
Rain, snow, cloudy skies, fair and warmer tomorrow — that's what weather means to most of us. But to radio engineers it means the condition of the many layers of electrified air surrounding the earth. This "weather" is important to you for it determines how clearly you will receive your favorite programs. And being able to predict this "weather" 27 days in advance enables radio engineers to insure better reception for all broadcasts.

More Records Soon
Record fans! Here's good news! About the middle of December there'll be many more records available, because the materials they're made of will be more plentiful.
That means more tunes and arrangements to brighten up those moments when you want to choose your own musical selections.

It's also a reminder that when the war is over you'll want to get a new and better radio-phonograph, one that makes your favorite recorded artists sound alive with rich, vibrant tones.
When "production for peace" is under way again, Majestic will have just the radio-phonographs for you. Using new and exciting radio techniques and devices, Majestic will make radio-phonographs that do justice to your records — reproducing sweet and swing alike with lifelike clarity and depth of tone against a background that's free of screech and scratch. Be sure to see Majestic before you buy, for Majestic means radio-phonographs at their best!

The top daytime programs as rated by Hooper for November are: Breakfast at Sardi's, 1st; When A Girl Marries, 2nd; Ma Perkins, 3rd; Right to Happiness, 4th; and Young Widder Brown, 5th.

Swinging-Singing
It would appear that a career as a boxer is an important prelude to a career as a radio crooner. Frank Sinatra was once an amateur boxer. Rudy Vallee has the reputation of being handy with the gloves. And a radio newcomer, Johnnie Johnston, has a record of 33 wins, three draws and only three fights lost—and he never hit the canvas.

ORDERS SURVEY OF OLD CANAL AS SUPER ROAD

Green Proposes Speedy Link to Airport.

Two Big Advantages Cited.

Wesley W. Polk, the state's chief highway engineer, will have charge of the superhighway survey, which will have top priority in studies of the use of state funds on projects that would provide work for returning veterans and be valuable as permanent public improvements. The Green administration has built up a 110 million dollar surplus for such post-war use. Local sponsors of highway projects count on the state and federal treasuries for financing.

Advocates of the canal route contend that it has two major advantages to justify immediate attention:

1. The canal already is public property, thus the expense and delay of purchasing and condemning right of way would be saved. A study by the Illinois legislative council has found some conflict as to whether title is held by the state or the federal governments, and Sen. Richard J. Daley [D., Chicago], minority leader in the state senate, announced yesterday he would urge a speedy agreement on that point. Congressman Sabath [D., Chicago], obtained house passage Monday of his bill to declare the canal nonnavigable within Cook county. That was one of the needed prelim)naries.

2. Elaborate and expensive construction work would be avoided, thus effecting further savings. Most superhighway projects call for the demolition of buildings, the deadening of streets, and the solution by engineers of complicated problems. Most of them would be avoided along the I. & M. canal. Part of its property is a 90 foot strip on each side. Each strip could be converted into a multilaned highway, with opposing streams of traffic divided by a parkway.

Route Would Reduce Costs.

Chicago and Illinois officials long have included the I. & M. canal in blueprints for solutions to end the traffic congestion that has clogged metropolitan streets and made access to the city difficult for downstaters.

Recent city estimates were that the southwest route would cost 19 million dollars for a nine mile superhighway, only part of which would have the advantage of canal economies. That was at the rate of $2,111,000 a mile. For it city-wide 67 mile network of expressways the cost would be 260 million dollars, or $3,955,000 a mile. The increase would be attributed to right of way expenses and more difficult construction.

In his instructions to Polk the governor did not specify to what extent the abandoned canal should be utilized, but it was recalled that the possibilities of the canal have received much attention recently from governmental agencies.

Sponsored by Chicago Council.

The Chicago council since 1940 has sponsored the canal route as a major artery in the super-highway system advocated by Mayor Kelly and other officials. The Chicago plan commission a year ago published a recommendation that the canal route be utilized from the city limits to the vicinity of Western av., from which point it would cut eastward thru residential and business districts. Cicero av., leading to the airport, would be one of the traffic outlets over cloverleaf separations. The Chicago regional planning association has suggested that the canal route be followed as far as Argo-Summit, where the river could be crossed at Lawndale av. to join the present U. S. 66.

From Cicero to Kedzie avs., the stretch where the first construction is planned, the canal is almost wholly within the odd numbered sections which more than a century ago were given to the state government to help pay costs of digging the ditch. Legal questions about the title to right of way should the canal be converted to other uses involve chiefly the even numbered sections, which at that time were retained by the federal government.

Rep. Sabath has suggested that the canal be converted into a highway all the way to La Salle. His bill to declare it nonnavigable within Cook county encountered no opposition in Washington. Sabath informed the city council committee on finance that he had approving letters from Secretary of War Stimson, the federal works agency, and Assistant Secretary Abe Fortas of the interior department.

Sen. Daley, who is Mayor Kelly's legislative spokesman, said he would ask the legislature next month to have a joint committee assigned to promoting federal and state coöperation for the canal highway project. Rep. Ora D. Smith [D., Biggsville] is to be co-sponsor, he said. Daley suggested that the canal route be followed from Ashland av. to Joliet.

"The canal is there, and no excavating is necessary for a depressed route such as highway engineers are discussing," Driey said. "Since long legal proceedings won't be necessary, construction could start quickly.

"This is a neglected asset, about which something must be done. I also have in mind that the canal route would be a great help in serving the rapidly growing southwest part of the city. The Studebaker and Dodge factories in that area are only two of the war plants that have speeded the development of that region to a point where improved transportation is imperative."

The state division of waterways in a report last April to Director Walter A. Rosenfield of the public works and buildings department advocated that the canal be used as a southwest highway from Chicago to Joliet, relieving automobile and truck congestion.

HOLDS UNIONS, PRICE CONFUSION BIG DAIRY WOES

Confusion over dairy price controls and the threat of union organization of dairy farmers are the two most important problems confronting the dairy industry, Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Coöperative Milk Producers federation, told the federation's convention in the Morrison hotel yesterday.

"Dairy farmers face the near future threat of drastically lowered income as a result of fumbling government price and control policies," Holman said, adding that federal subsidies provide about 14 per cent of the income of the average dairy farmer.

"A second threat which should not be minimized," he said, "is that of increased production costs which will occur if union labor succeeds in organizing dairy workers and dairy farmers. He said the International Teamsters' union is organizing employes of dairy farms.

FOUR IN FAMILY AMONG 6 DEAD IN AUTO FIRE

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 6 (AP).—Sheriff Lester Gonzales of Ascension parish reported that six persons were burned to death in a car fire about 2 a. m. today near Sorrento, La.

State Police Capt. L. O. Hood said that five of the victims had been identified as Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Lalonde and their children, Leroy, 7, and Betty Lou, 5, of Opelousas, La., and Armand Miller, a Negro truck driver from Sunset, La.

The car, bearing an Ohio license tag, was found by a passing motorist, overturned and still burning.

BIG ED LAUGHS AND LAUGHS, BUT WHAT OF TODAY?

Big Ed Hribk had last night what police called a laughing jag, but it wasn't a laughing matter to police. Hribk, who is 38 and lives at 1657 S. Throop st., weighs 287 pounds and is 6 feet 5 inches tall.

He boarded a southbound street car in State st. at Randolph st., allegedly refused to pay his fare, then wrapped himself around the center upright bar of the rear platform. He laughed all the way to Roosevelt rd., where the street car crew called the police. He was still wrapped around the bar and still laughing.

Policemen James Foley and Anthony De Rosa finally untangled Hribk and pushed him into a patrol wagon. At the station Hribk refused to get out. De Rosa and Foley tried to handcuff him, but the cuffs were too small. They obtained an oversize pair. Then, after much struggling—and laughing on Hribk's part—rolled him on a flat truck and wheeled him into the station. Hribk finally wound up in a cell, where he was last seen smiling himself to sleep. He'll be in police court this morning.

Need a hand with your dirty work, lady?

WHAT A walloping lot of dirt you meet in the course of a day's housekeeping! Dirt on curtains, dirt on rugs, dirt on furniture, walls, floors, windows, and dishes! No wonder women keep saying, "Housekeeping would be a cinch, if it weren't for the cleaning up!"

But there's this about it, anyway—you do have dozens of products and appliances today to make the job easier.

And you have the benefit of constant study by our dirt-chasers, at Good Housekeeping.

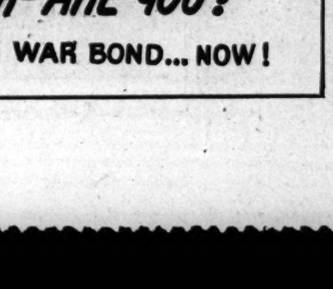
Is that fluid good for cleaning woodwork? Should you use powder to clean your rugs? What about those creamy emulsions for polishing furniture? Will that cleanser take the spots off wallpaper?

To save you time, labor, money

Obviously, you can't try out this, that, and the other thing that comes along.

But we can—and do—so as to give you the benefit of our findings. For we're anxious to take the drudgery out of housework. We want to help you enjoy your home and its daily care.

We have a simple, common sense standard for judging any new cleaning product: Will it do the job? Unless we conscientiously believe the answer is "yes"—neither our advertising nor editorial columns will make such claims.



A bottle and sponge are all you need nowadays to remove fingerprints from paint. Good Housekeeping tells you how.

Before we try a chemical cleaning product for performance, it goes to our laboratory to be analyzed—to see whether it's easy on your hands as well as your household goods.

If the formula is acceptable to our chemists, we give the product a rigorous workout. Say it's a new cleaning fluid. We want to see whether it will remove soil from painted surfaces without affecting the gloss. So we apply the cleaner to a series of painted wood panels as many as FIFTY times, in succession.

If the paint stays bright . . . if the cleaner is easy to apply . . . you'll hear about it, from us. Otherwise not.

We do things the hard way

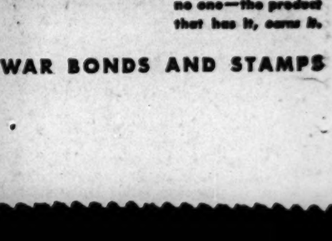
To make it easier for you, we go at jobs the hard way. When we want to see whether a rug cleaner will remove spots safely—or a soapless preparation will do a good overall cleaning job—we select a delicate pastel rug that shows every spot.

To judge the efficiency of vacuum cleaners right in the home, we've gone into home after home, divided the rugs into sections, and cleaned each section with a different machine—then actually weighed the dirt—to determine how effectively the cleaners did the job.

Over a period of years, we've tried out a hundred and eleven different kinds of dishwashers, to judge how practical they'd be in your household.

Sometimes we ask your help in deciding which product best serves your needs.

That's what we did, for example, with three different kinds of floor wax. We sent all three to a list of consumers, with instructions to use them on floors and report. From the questionnaires that came in, we were able to decide which things about each wax women liked best.



If a day ever comes when magic appliances magnetize the dishes right off your table and wash them, we'll be the first to cheer. Till then, we're going to stick to reality and tell you the easiest way to wash dishes with soap and water and the appliances that are available.

That's the way we work. And why? So that you will continue to regard Good Housekeeping as your homemaking Bureau of Standards—so that you will look to us for sound, practical information, always.

As evidence of our sincerity, we make you a pledge—a pledge we shall repeat as long as Good Housekeeping is printed:

That at no time, and not for any reason, or any profit, will any page of Good Housekeeping—editorial or advertising—trade unfairly on your trust.

QUICK TRICKS for BUSY DAYS

Once Thanksgiving is behind us, life speeds up, faster and faster, until Christmas is here and gone. On days when you get home later than you had planned, it's a big relief to have a delicious quickie up your sleeve that will put a good supper on the table in a hurry. Get acquainted with today's recipe and you're all set for a race with the clock. You'll win every time.

MOR-Vegetable Shortcake

3 cups biscuit mix (or directions below)
1 tbsp. minced onion
1½ cups milk
2 cups medium white sauce
4 tbsp. chopped onion
2 tsp. Wilson's B-V
1½ cups cooked carrots
1 can Mor, diced
2 tbsp. chopped parsley

Combine biscuit mix and minced onion, add milk and stir until thoroughly moistened. Pour into two margarined 8-inch cake pans and bake in a hot oven, 425° F., about 20 min. Meanwhile make the white sauce (using 4 tbsp. Certified Margarine, 5 tbsp. flour, 2 cups milk) after having browned the chopped onion in the margarine. When thickened, add the B-V which has been dissolved in a small amount of the hot white sauce, the carrots, Mor and parsley (optional) and keep hot until ready to serve. Split the two layers of biscuit and serve the meat and vegetable mixture between layers and on top. Cut in wedges for serving. Serves 6.

KEEP EMERGENCY SHELF STOCKED

Planning ahead is one of the secrets of the success of any quickie. It's wise to keep several cans of delicious, time-saving Mor on hand at all times. The same goes for biscuit mix. You can make your own mix very quickly by following these easy directions.

Biscuit Mix

8 cups flour
4 tsp. salt
½ cup baking powder
1 cup Wilson's Bake-Rite

Combine flour, salt and baking powder, mix thoroughly and sift. Add Wilson's Bake-Rite and cut in with pastry blender until as fine as cornmeal. Store in covered container.

A combination vegetable salad, tossed while the shortcake is baking, pickled beets, coffee or milk, with raspberry Bavarian Cream (made the evening before) makes a supper that will bring smiles a-plenty your way.

HAVE YOU NOTICED?

A bit of evergreen on the table brings Christmas cheer right along with it. Arrange bright colored tree decorations among it and sprinkle artificial snow over all for a gay effect. Puts everyone in the Christmas spirit.

Apples are just right for delicious pies these days. For that extra touch, grate Certified American Cheese and sprinkle over the baked pie just a few minutes before taking it out of the oven. Grand on mince meat pie, too!

Cold weather is baked beans weather. Almost the only time we relish baked beans when it isn't cold is while camping out or picnicking. Deep brown beans, Boston style, probably are the people's choice, but there are bean lovers who go for the tomato sauced dish, too.

Left-over baked beans may be strained and made into a baked bean soup, or mashed, seasoned with mustard or catsup, and used to make hearty filling for sandwiches. Down to the last bean, baked beans were meant to be enjoyed.

Brown bread is grandma's favorite accompaniment for baked beans. Gingerbread, corn bread, or whole wheat bread baked fresh at home is good bean company, too.

Baked Beans, Traditional Style.
[Serves six.]

2 cups dried navy beans
¼ pound salt pork or bacon
⅓ cup molasses or brown sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 onion

Wash beans, cover with water, and simmer gently until tender, adding more water as necessary. Simmering will take 2 hours or more. Drain beans, saving cooking water. Turn beans into bean pot or casserole. Scrape pork rind until white, score fat, and bury in beans with rind exposed, [or mix diced bacon with the beans]. Bury onion in beans. Mix molasses and seasonings with 1½ cups of the cooking water and pour over beans. Cover and bake in a 275-300 degree oven for 4 hours, uncovering beans during last hour. Add more cooking water from beans as necessary. What liquid remains may be used for soup.

If you use tomato sauce, catsup, or chili sauce to help flavor baked beans, chili powder is an excellent added seasoner. My preference is for beans exactly according to the foregoing recipe—I'd rather have the tomato in salad.

Steamed Brown Bread.
[Two cans or more.]

1 cup corn meal
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup rolled oats
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 cup raisins or dates
1½ cups milk
½ cup molasses
1½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons soda
¾ cup water

Combine corn meal, whole wheat flour, oats, and raisins. Soak crumbs in milk and rub thru strainer. Add molasses, salt, and soda. Mix well and add water. Stir in dry mixture and raisins, blend, and fill greased molds not more than two-thirds full. If molds or cans are small, three or four may be required. Cover tightly, place on a rack in a kettle of boiling water, and steam for 2½ to 3 hours, keeping water boiling. Bread may be dried out in a moderate oven for a few minutes, if desired. To reheat left-over bread, re-place in can, cover, and steam for about 20 minutes.

Nuts may be used in place of half the raisins. This recipe is a little different from the usual formula for steamed brown bread, but it gives delicious results.

Child's Trying Behaviorisms Soon Vanish

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Those wild antics, that clownishness, the silly giggling, that inconsiderateness known as heedlessness, and that naughtiness, usually look to our adult eyes like misbehavior—something for us to get right at and correct. Yet if we could only wait, we'd get a different slant on our children's trying actions. And if we could wait just a little longer, we'd find that, something like a bubble that bursts, they've vanished into thin air.

Why? Because most of that behavior has been merely a symptom of growth and development. So don't think of everything your child does which doesn't seem to you perfect, as being a fault. Think of it, instead, as part of his growth and development, as his attempt to adjust himself to a world whose ways are not natural to him, and almost always not understandable.

Or let me put it another way: Expect your child to change. By that I don't mean that you just expect him to grow taller and stronger and more mature, with his gold curls turning dark and his rosy color fading, but expect his behavior to change. Prepared for that, you won't be so surprised and discouraged at each new development.

Perhaps you think that's silly and superfluous advice. "Of course I expect my child to change," you may say. Yet innumerable mothers actually complain in their letters of the fact that their children are different, are changing.

This different behavior is not permanent, but is due to changes that are taking place in your child. For example, intense absorption in play and lack of fluent speech produce a "no." With a growing sense of power comes disobedience. When chores become mechanical, a child begins to lose interest. When playmates show the way by bravado and funny antics these are imitated and practiced on the family at home as an experiment. These are normal changes which are likely to come to every child, but which, handled sensibly, pass quickly by, only to give place to another phase of his development.

And when the last stage, adolescence, appears you will need all the wisdom at your command to remind yourself constantly that the surprising and often worrisome changing behavior of these years is still only part of a very vital and difficult adjustment.

Iron Is Vital to Robust Well-being

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN HELPS HOLD THE "IRON LEVEL" IN YOUR BLOOD

Famous cereal gives over one-third your daily iron needs

EVERYONE—children and grown-ups—must get enough iron to help build the billions of new blood cells the body needs every day.

The best way to get iron, of course, is in foods. But very few foods provide an appreciable amount of iron. And under-par vitality may result if your diet falls short of this vital mineral.

There's one popular food, however, that's iron-rich. It's famous KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Just one ounce of this nut-sweet cereal gives you more than one-third your daily iron needs. ALL-BRAN actually contains more available iron than spinach. That's because ALL-BRAN is made from the vital outer layers of finest wheat.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN—MADE FROM THE VITAL OUTER LAYERS OF FINEST WHEAT

Probably you know that the skin of the potato or the peel of an apple is chock-full of essential food values. Into the vital outer layers of wheat, too, Nature has packed some of the grain's most important nutrients.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is made from these vital outer layers—that's why it's not only rich in iron, but is a storehouse of lots of other important food elements. In fact, ALL-BRAN is more abundant in many of these food elements than good whole wheat itself.

Triple Milled for Golden Softness

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is triple milled for golden softness. It's an appetizing way to get wholesome nourishment and extra iron. And it's America's most famous "regulating" cereal. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's, made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

MANY HEALTHY PATRIOTS GIVE BLOOD REGULARLY

Miss Katherine V. Newsome of 140 West Street, N. Y., has donated 16 pints of blood. She and many others give blood regularly, for they know that anyone in good health can donate blood without discomfort. The fluid part of the blood is restored in a few hours; the red corpuscles are soon rebuilt if the "iron level" of the blood is properly maintained.

Today with Women

Anniversary of Pearl Harbor Brings News of Navy Citations

BY JUDITH CASS.

THREE years ago today the young men of Chicago felt their blood rise when the Japs struck the treacherous blow at Pearl Harbor. Since then many of them, and their fathers and sisters, too, have gone into service. This third anniversary of that historic date brings news of two prominent Chicagoans who have distinguished themselves in the war—two of many Chicagoans who are making their city proud—Comdr. Lester Armour and Lt. Comdr. Curtis B. Munson of the naval reserve.

Word has been received from headquarters of the United States naval forces in Europe that Comdr. Armour has been awarded the bronze star medal by Adm. Harold R. Stark, commander of our naval forces in Europe, for organizing and directing special activities in support of allied military operations before and after D-day. His citation reads in part: "Comdr. Armour demonstrated qualities of leadership, vision, imagination, and resourcefulness in bringing to the support of American military forces a type of operation new and unique in American military history and organization. Comdr. Armour's meritorious service was of great value in support of the allied landing in Normandy and liberation of France."

Comdr. Armour's wife and younger children, Stanton Vernon, and Leola, are hoping that he will be back with them in Lake Forest soon—perhaps by Christmas—on leave. Lt. Lester Armour Jr. is serving in the South Pacific with the army air forces.

Comdr. Munson, who has received the same distinction as Comdr Armour, won his medal for his part in the invasion assault on the Normandy coast last June. Following two years of service abroad he returned to this country last August and now is stationed at the Boston navy yard.

The day after Pearl Harbor, Bundles for America was organized, and its first project was filling 8,000 Christmas stockings for distribution in this area. This year more than 20,000 stockings have been sent to our men aboard ships and at far flung outposts, and each week 15,000 more are filled in headquarters. The organization will celebrate its third anniversary with a tea from 2 to 4 p. m. tomorrow, at which Mayor Kelly will be the special guest. Mrs. John Crerar is chairman of the group's honorary committee.

Engagement News.

The G. J. Nickels of Winnetka, who already have three naval officers in their family, shortly will acquire a fourth. When their daughter, Lt. [j. g.] Virginia Elizabeth Nickel of the WAVES, came home on leave last month, she was accompanied by the young man to whom her parents have announced her engagement, Lt. [j. g.] Richard Charles Nehring of the naval reserve.

Miss Nickel was graduated from Northwestern university and completed her officer training at Smith college. She is stationed in Boston, Mass. Lt. Nehring, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Nehring of Bronxville, N. Y., was graduated in 1942 from Dartmouth college. He recently returned from duty in the South Pacific for further training in Florida.

More Horrors of War.

A portly and prosperous executive stood in line to buy cigarets and as he waited, puffed away on a pipe. An onlooker asked him whether he just used the pipe because he couldn't get his favorite brand of cigarets. "No," he answered, "but my secretary uses my pipe and my tobacco if she can't get cigarets and I have to keep on the alert getting them for her!"

Word Games.

It really is too bad that I have kept no file on our contests. I am sure we had, indeed, "more than 250 common words" on the top row of the typewriter and more than four with ten letters each. For example, proprietor, perpetuity, repertoire, perruquier, pepperette, pepperwort, pepperroot. An expert hesitates to say these are the only ones.

In the second row, of course there is Galahad—the word more common than the conduct, no doubt; and more than 60 others with fewer than seven letters. Another of seven letters I do not think of and would be glad to hear of it.

As for opposites: Let's not let the army down by letting up on the bond drive.

THE REAL WORD EXPERT.

Roberta.

Others have remarked about her heart shaped face. Surely it hasn't gone unnoticed by the boys at Gardiner General hospital who know her as "Roberta" and beg her to sing and play one more song on her concert ukelele. She sings there regularly every week. She also has sung at hospitals at Great Lakes and Fort Sheridan and has appeared on 200 bond shows.

It all started when she was a stenographer [Helen Schueler is her real name]. With high school and some business training—and no vocal training—she more or less happened to get into the work she now enjoys so thoroly, appearing first at the Treasury center, then with the U. S. O. and now hoping to go in a Purple Heart unit—altho a couple of big name orchestras have covetous eyes on her. At present she's studying voice . . . keeping watch for cute, funny little novelty songs "because the boys love them" and for more ballads like "I'll Walk Alone" and "You Always Hurt The One You Love"—the two favorites in the service men's hit parade. . . . A busy girl, Roberta, with four brothers in service, letters to write, songs to sing, and a ukelele to strum for "the most appreciative audience in the world."

Fabrics Scarce, So Paris Relies on Makeshifts

"Standard" Dress Ready

PARIS, Dec. 6 (AP).—The latest Paris fashion is a simple "standard" brown woolen dress which couturiers are turning out free for women war refugees. The French Aid society supplies the material to dress shops which make a weekly quota. The output now is being sent to women in the Caen area of Normandy. The dress has a full skirt, full length sleeves, V-neck line with a row of buttons down the front, and a belt.

BY ANNE BRUYERE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The winter fashion showings here forced Parisian designers, in the absence of a great many of the more staple materials, to rely on substitutes for their collections. Much ingenuity in the use of these makeshift materials brought out some unusual combinations as well as many smart new ideas in feminine apparel.

Marcelle Chaumont startled her patrons with a leopard skin dress, which is worn with a wide leather belt. A large square bag made of matching brown leather was attached to the belt at the waist. The model was trimmed at its high neckline with brown and white eight-petaled leather flowers and the ensemble was completed by a box coat of brown wool.

Panther fur trimmed the stitched-on bolero of another street dress, the skirt of which was made of the same fur. A pointed and befeathered hat, also of panther, had twin plumes sticking up jauntily on the right side.

Breitschwanz, a glossy, pliable fur, was used like jersey to form the intricate drapery set diagonally across the hips of an afternoon dress made entirely of this fur.

For sports wear Chaumont showed tailored suits in blue and white checkered wool, red, green, black, and yellow plaids, and several made of high colored corduroys. This firm's dressy coats were made of heavy, coarse ribbed silk.

Jean Dresses also presented bizarre and unusual effects with out-of-the-ordinary materials. This house featured sports ensembles of variegated colors. Red fox trimmed the edges of a full length orange, green, and black plaid coat worn over an orange dress. Goatskin trimmed a checkered Canadian jacket which was worn with a black corduroy skirt.

Pomegranate red leather buckles trimmed the strapped-on shoulders of a tweed suit. The same buckled ornaments replaced the buttons on the double breasted front and on the back of the fitted waist.

A G. I. Gives the Girls Few Good Pointers

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

on the SOLID side

They have had plenty of time to think it over, and many a G. I. Joe has filled a long, lonely evening thinking about home and the gal he left behind him—or the girl he'd like to find there when he does come home.

He knows exactly how he would like this dream gal to look, how he would like her to talk, and almost what he would like her to say. Here are some inside tips from a G. I. who did his date-dreaming while stationed in Persia. Altho his information was based on observing women in the army, it's good thought material also for the honeychiles back home.

Camouflage—It goes great in the army and is a MUST in combat. But, girls, don't burden your inherent prettiness with too many excess beauty aids. Men prefer quiet charm to blatant beauty.

Discipline—A necessity for G. I.s, and the post-war civilian [ex-soldier] will like his women well behaved, with charm and good training, not the noisy, unrestrained type.

Maintenance—Another MUST in our mechanized warfare to "keep them rolling." With the girls it should be a "keep fit" motif. A healthy, sound body and mind naturally result in a vibrant personality.

Marksmanship—A soldier's best friend is his rifle and marksmanship is his rifle's personality. The aliveness of a rifle is reflected in women by their vitality and straight-shooting with the mouthpiece. A straightforward manner will be the best approach to a returning soldier.

Strategy—The wisdom of the army is strategy. Women should show their wisdom thru their actions. Perform the right maneuver at the right time; be tactful and truthful—and ALWAYS be feminine.

Before they turned G. I., most boys liked their special gals to be attractive, feminine, and fun to be with, and when they come back they will want the same things, with the added attractions of greater intelligence and new understanding. Most girls have time to themselves these days; be sure you're not just in a rut, but right in the groove!

Single Outfit Serves for All Winter Sports

BY REA SEEGER.

Winter sports enthusiasts used to be pampered individuals, what with specified outfits for skating, others designed just for ski fun, and others for tobogganing and spectator sports. This period now can be called history for a single sleek, streamlined outfit of razor edged pressed pants [held securely under the foot with a strap] and a wind and weather repellent jacket-blouse top, is worn for virtually every snow and winter sport known.

You skate in this outfit, ski in it, and slide in it—you can even sit among the spectators at a hockey match in such an outfit and be smart and correctly garbed. The pants and blouse top are regulation models, fun and color is provided with the gayest of accessories, such as mittens, scarfs, sweaters, socks, lounging shoe-socks, and caps, even the silly embroidered suspenders. And these are blazing bright with color and design, more than enough to make up for the strictly basic two piece suit.

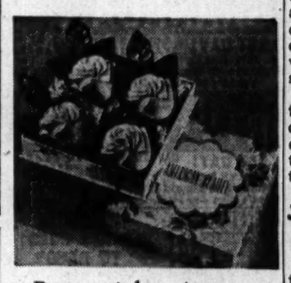
The suits are definitely neutral: Winter navy blue, a lighter shade called cadet blue, and a few—very few—natural colored tops to be worn with navy blue pants. Occasionally you'll find dark forest green wool. The wool is smooth, wind proof, and not heavy, so it tailors flawlessly. These suits are more dress parade than the navy or light blues, but still have that professional simplicity, resembling a uniform.

The other material used by designers is ski cloth that looks like cotton and has the same feather weight. This, of course, is used for the blouse jacket as the pants are of sturdy wool. Hoods are sometimes cut in one piece with the jacket, and same are detachable. The visored caps are more popular than the hoods, for the visor serves as a sun shade.

Thru the Looking Glass

Don't ever think that soap is an unglamorous gift. For thousands of women a soap that is pretty, perfumed, and richly bland is one of the most exciting of possessions. One of the thriftiest, most level headed career women we know is like that; she thinks not twice, but thrice before she spends a dime on some of the necessities of life, but her sales resistance falls to zero when she even looks at fine toilet soaps.

You can spend a lot of money on the luxury soaps, or you can spend a little. Beauty aid styling being as good as it is, some inexpensive little gift boxes of soap are knockouts to look at and luscious to own.



Rose scented guest soaps.

There's one, for instance, that costs about the price of a good handkerchief—and not for just one guest size cake, but for four.

These are scented in the good old standby of the favorite flower—the American beauty rose, heady and sweet and always romantic. Their fragrance has influenced their design, too. Each cake is exquisitely molded in the shape of a perfect, plump rose bud—and tinted the same warm pink.

The inexpensive gift box of four carved cakes is a pretty package, with the design of red, red roses spattered over its surface and the small soap gems nestled among shiny green leaves. It's an eye catcher—and a lot of charming gift for a little money.

SYNOPSIS: John Ranger of Circle-JR ranch and three cattlemen go in search of rustlers who killed Rod Spillman. In the rustlers' attempt to get away one is killed and a stranger, Cape Sloan, is taken prisoner. Uhlmann and Sholte want to hang the stranger, believing he is one of Scarface's bandits, but John Ranger and Russell Hart insist upon justice. Sloan escapes. Singlehanded, he rescues Sandra and Nelson Ranger from the Lopez raiders and escorts them back to their father, who dresses his wound and takes him to the Ranger ranch. There Jim Budd, Negro cook, recognizes him as Mr. Webb, escaped prisoner. John Ranger voices his suspicion of the way Jug Packard secured control of the Johnny B mine and sent young Webb to prison for the murder of Giles Lemmon. Noting Sloan's reaction, Sandra gets him to admit he is young Bob Webb. Sloan's intention is to vindicate his name. He locates Stan Fraser, who believes Sloan's father was killed by foul play. The petition for Young Webb's pardon was blocked by Jug Packard, who fraudulently secured the Webb share in the Johnny B mine and framed young Webb for the killing of Giles Lemmon. Fraser accompanies Sloan to Tucson to locate Chandler Newman, former bookkeeper at the Johnny B mine. Sloan senses there is an understanding between Scarface and the cattlemen. Uhlmann and Sholte, yet Scarface warns Sloan his identity is known to Uhlmann. Sloan eludes his pursuers. John and Sandra Ranger visit Sloan's sister, and at the request of Fraser they contact Newman. Under assurance of protection, Newman agrees to talk. After a visit to his sister, Sloan and Fraser are about to leave town when Uhlmann recognizes Sloan and arouses the town against the escaped convict. Trapped in the hotel, Sloan and Fraser seek refuge and find themselves in Sandra's room.

INSTALMENT XXII.

PLANS FOR FLIGHT.

John Ranger came into the room thru a door connecting with his. "What's all this?" he demanded sternly.

"We're huntin' for that escaped murderer, Webb," Morris explained apologetically. "He's around somewhere—probably in the hotel."

"He might of slipped in to hide without her noticin' him," Uhlmann growled.

"But I told them I was awake and got up when the shooting started," Sandra explained to her father.

"Sure, Mr. Ranger," a man in the background said. "Sorry we disturbed the young lady. Might have been an empty room far as we knew. Let's go, Rip."

Ranger closed the door without ceremony. He stood there for a long minute listening to the hunters troop down the hall and try the next room. When he turned at last, it was to say in a low voice, "Come out from behind that bed." The crouching men stood up.

"We butted in, not knowing this was Miss Sandra's room," Fraser mentioned.

"I made them stay and hide," Sandra added.

Fraser said gently, "We're sure obliged to Miss Sandra for helping us out of a mighty hot spot, John."

"I'll never forget it," Webb added.

"It came so sudden," the girl explained shyly.

Ranger did not discuss that point. The situation explained itself. "You're a hard man to help, Webb," he told the convict bluntly. "In your circumstances nobody but a fool would be in Tucson—or in Arizona at all."

"How often I've told him that," Fraser agreed.

"We were just leaving when we ran across Uhlmann coming out of the Legal Tender." Webb attempted no justification. "I know I'm a nuisance. Sorry, it has to be that way. Better give up trying to help me. I don't want to get you into trouble—or Stan either for that matter."

"It's you we're worried about," Sandra reminded him.

"Better let us carry on, Webb," the cattleman urged. "We are taking the Newmans to the Circle-JR to protect the husband. He will testify that Packard falsified the smelter returns. The superintendent of the smelter must have been in on the deal. I understand he now lives at Phoenix. It looks as if we have got something on Jug that might bust him wide open, providing we can drive our wedge in and prove a conspiracy. Frankly, you can't be of any help in this. The thing for you to do is get out and hole up until we send for you."

"I'll keep out of yore way," Webb promised. "And I'll be very grateful for anything you can do to clear me."

Ranger took the hunted men back with him to his room. The best chance for a getaway would be just before daybreak. Webb's enemies would check up all the wagon yards and corrals in town to find the horses of Fraser and Webb. But probably they would not succeed in finding them, since Henry Mitchell had moved them to a pasture owned by his brother on the river bottom just out of town.

Night still filled the sky when John Ranger walked out of the hotel to make the arrangements for the escape of his friends. Pete Sholte moved forward from the entrance to the Legal Tender and joined the Circle-JR owner.

"Ain't you up early, John?" he asked.

Ranger looked at him with disfavor. "No earlier than you are, Pete," he answered coldly.

"I'm kinda on duty," Sholte explained. "The boys think that fellow Webb is still around. We aim to cook his goose if we find him."

"Meaning just what?"

"You a deputy sheriff?"

"Not exactly. You don't have to be to collect a fellow like this with a reward on his head."

"Is there a reward offered for the arrest of Cape Sloan?"

"He's Bob Webb, that's who he is. Rhino recognized him."

"I was with Uhlmann several times in the presence of Sloan," Ranger observed. "He didn't say anything about Sloan being young Webb. If you make a mistake and kill the wrong man you might find yourself in prison, Pete. Better go slow."

"We'd ought to of hanged this bird when we first saw him in the canyon," Sholte retorted bitterly. "I said so, but you and Russ Hart wouldn't have it that way."

Ranger did not think it worth while to answer that complaint. He walked up Congress st. and disappeared in the darkness.

In the east a pale promise of light was sifting into the sky when Sholte notified his companions that Ranger had returned and vanished into the hotel.

Uhlmann slammed a hamlike fist on the table and set the chips rattling. "You can't tell me he doesn't know where that wolf is holed up. Had him down to his ranch for a while, didn't he? They don't just happen to be in town at the same time."

"Don't forget there's a pot on the table that's practically mine," Cole Hawkins reminded him, and shoved in a stack of blues. "Might be they are boilin' up bad medicine for the gent whose testimony sent Webb to the pen."

"They can't do a thing to me," Uhlmann blustered. "Webb is the one headed for trouble." He ripped out an angry oath. "If I ever get my gun on him they won't have to bother taking him back to Yuma."

"If you happened to be the lucky gent and not the one to be measured for a wooden box," Hawkins retorted. The San Simon valley man was a rustler and bad character generally. He had joined the hunt for Webb because of the excitement, yet had hoped they would not find the convict. Whatever of evil Webb might have done, he felt that the young fellow's faults were trivial compared to those of Hans Uhlmann or Jug Packard.

"No if about it," the big man boasted. "I'll take that bird on any day of the week."

"Okay with me," Hawkins agreed. "Question before the house is, do you call, raise, or fold?"

Uhlmann looked at his cards again and threw them into the discard. "I'm laying down a flush. Any chump could tell you've got a full."

The San Simon rustler flipped his cards over and reached for the pot. He had two small pairs.

Indian Woman Soon May Be Made Saint by Catholic Church

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 6 (AP).—Catherine Tekakwitha, Iroquois Indian who died in 1680 at the age of 22, soon may be made a saint by the congregation of rites, which also is considering beatification of six other Americans and nine Canadians.

Preliminary steps toward sanctification of Tekakwitha were made in the diocese of Albany and Montreal, where she lived. The beatification move was made formally in 1939, and on Jan. 3, 1943, in the pope's presence, her virtue was solemnly proclaimed and the title "venerable" bestowed. Miracles attributed to her now are under investigation, and, if proved, she will be beatified.

Another "venerable" whose miracles are under investigation is John Neumann, first bishop of Philadelphia, who died in 1860. The cause of Elizabeth Anna Bailey, known as Mother Seton, who founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States and St. Joseph's college at Emmitsburg, Md., still is in the initial stages.

Also before the congregation of rites are the causes of Vincentian Father Felix de Andreis, who died in 1820 in the archdiocese of St. Louis; Francesco Seelos, Redemptionist father who died in 1867 after living in St. Louis and Baltimore; Mazino Catala, minor brother who lived in the archdiocese of San Francisco and died in 1830, and Sister Mary Magdalen Bentivoglio who lived in the diocese of Indianapolis and died in 1905.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is amazing. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

"THE WOMAN IN THE WINDOW."

An RKO-Radio picture, directed by Fritz Lang, starring Joan Bennett and Edward G. Robinson, with Raymond Massey and Dan Duryea, and presented at the Palace.

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Without implying anything in particular, it is worth noting that Hollywood reaches its peak of late only when preoccupied with murder. "Laura" and "Double Indemnity" were topnotch yarns dealing with this most fascinating of human defections, and now comes "The Woman in the Window" to make three of a good thing. It is arguable if it comes entirely up to the level of its predecessors, but the difference is slight.

In "Double Indemnity" Edward G. Robinson was dishing it out as the insurance claims adjuster. This time he is on the receiving end as the murderer, and he is equally good. So good, in fact, that you writhe in sympathy and want to put out a restraining hand as this well meaning college professor weaves about himself a seemingly inextricable web of folly.

The professor's wife and two kids have just left for a vacation, and the professor feels a bit on the town. He has dinner at his club with two cronies, one of them Raymond Massey, the district attorney, and has three drinks instead of his customary one. After dinner he takes a stroll, stopping in front of an art shop to admire the painting of a beautiful woman, when a remarkably similar reflection in the window glass causes him to turn around and confront the charming model herself. She is Joan Bennett and you don't blame the professor too much for going to her luxurious apartment with her, especially since they seem conversationally to have much in common.

It could all have been very innocent but one of Joan's boy friends, of whose identity she is not even certain [Joan being that kind of a girl], breaks up the tête-à-tête in a jealous rage, and in self defense the professor plunges a pair of scissors into his back. Since Joan isn't aware that her friend was a powerful utilities magnate, the hapless professor convinces her they can dispose of the body and no one will be the wiser.

For a while it looks as if he might have been right, but as his friend, the district attorney, keeps him informed of developments, you are aware that discovery is inevitable and the ensuing suspense is not recommended for weak nerves. There is a trick ending that resolves the seemingly hopeless and sends you home in good humor, but also makes you wonder what, with "Ten Little Indians," mysteries are coming to.

Nunnally Johnson wrote and produced and Fritz Lang directed this good one, and the performances of the principals are peacherino, including Dan Duryea's crackling impersonation of a blackmailer.

Big Sisters Will Hear Notre Dame Law Dean

The second quarterly meeting and buffet luncheon of the Big Sisters, scheduled at 12:30 p. m. today in the House of Biggs, will bring as keynote speaker Clarence Manion, dean of the college of law at the University of Notre Dame. "Detour from Despotism" will be his subject. Committee chairmen whose reports will be heard at the meeting include Mrs. Charles A. Burns, Mrs. Peter J. Murphy, Mrs. Richard J. Nash Jr., Mrs. Charles P. Megan, and Mrs. Leo P. Finn.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 6.—Sol Lesser's "Three Is a Family" received so many hallelujahs he's aiming to do a sequel called "But We Call It Home," and continue the story of what happened in a four room flat when a careless stork dropped so many bundles. I'm hoping he gets the same cast—Charlie Ruggles, Helen Broderick, and Fay Bainter. . . . After seeing "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," Dr. Michael Thirey wants Mervyn Leroy for his story, "King Jo Jo." It's about an American soldier who dies in battle, then returns to haunt the girl who jilted him while he was away battling. . . . At the "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" opening, which gave VACS many thousands of dollars, Norma Shearer outshone all the rest. She looked the star from head to toe, done up in a lovely shade of red, with Mary Pickford on one arm, Marty Arrouge on the other. And Irene Dunne wore a bunch of feathers on the back of her head that could have hid her husband had he been a little slighter. . . . The guy who stole the picture was Bob Walker. That lad has a way with him. Van Johnson should take time out and learn. Not that Van isn't good—but Bob is better.

Sauce for the Goose.

You've been done to death with stories about Red Skelton's romances. Now I'd like to tell you about Red's ex-wife, Edna. She's romancing with such a nice guy—Frank Borzage. . . . After I wrote that Ingrid Bergman would be wonderful as a nun opposite Bing Crosby in "The Bells of St. Mary's," letters started pouring in reading somewhat as follows: "We agree with you, but how about Helen Hayes? She would be super." Well, how about it, Helen? . . . Lloyd C. Douglas, who wrote "The Robe," is writing another—"The Big Fisherman," which he doesn't expect to sell for a movie. He's been slowed down considerably because for weeks he's been quite ill at Cedars of Lebanon.

My Hat's Off to These Boys.

My son, Bill, fighting in the South Pacific, writes: "Last night we had a wonderful show, put on by the army, called 'Yanks A-poppin'.' Really terrific. Band was led by Frankie Farmer. You don't hear better music in the never-never land of the U. S. A. The acts and gags were howls. Closing number, done to the tune of 'I Want to Buy a Paper Doll,' laid us all in the aisle. This is the first live entertainment I've seen out here. The stars who've been here get enough write-ups, but I think the fellows in the service who put on a show like this certainly deserve some mention." So do I, Bill, and here it is.

Really Too, Too Bad.

Sidelight to Cecil B. De Mille's battle with AFRA is that he offered to give back to each member the dollar they were assessed to defeat proposition No. 12 which AFRA opposed. It amounted to $2,000. The union wouldn't accept De Mille's offer. There will be many repercussions over this, and don't think for a minute I'm agin' unions. I carried a banner up and down Broadway for Equity. My husband was sued for a quarter of a million dollars when he closed his show. Night before, the Broadway producers dined at our house; next day not one of them spoke to us. But in those days the arbitrary demands were made not by unions but by the producers. The shoe's on the other foot now, and from where I sit, the foot looks too big for the shoe.

Not Again; I Can't Imagine It.

I can't believe Metro will sign Walter Wanger again as producer. That studio had him once and he turned out some of its poorest pictures. However, he might be useful in another capacity. He and Henry Wallace are palsy-walsy, if that means anything. . . . Walt Disney is moving his picture and crew over to Sam Goldwyn's lot, since "Wonder Man" is finished. Incidentally, marriage between Sam and George Glass is over; so is honeymoon. . . . Mrs. Lou Gehrig may sign for a radio show any edition. . . . Jimmy Fidler has signed for five more years with his sponsor. . . . Betty Hutton says the favorite song in the South Pacific is "Swinging on a Star." It ain't bad here, either. . . . At Ciro's Xavier Cugat drew a caricature of Jimmy Cardwell on his wife's white hat. "Now," says Cugie, "you've really got your hubby on your mind."

The bidding:

1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
6 hearts	Double	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of clubs.

Not long ago, my partner, in a social game of rubber bridge, doubled the opponents in a small slam contract, which they redoubled, and promptly proceeded to take all the tricks.

As politely as was possible, under the circumstances, I inquired of my partner his reason for doubling without any high cards. "Why, I always double six bids," he said with assurance. "They are so hard to make."

My own policy, on the contrary, has always been not to double six bids because they are so hard to beat. The gain of an additional 50 or 100 points is small compensation for the risk of affording the declarer the specific information he frequently requires for the fulfillment of his contract. Then again the privilege of a devastating redouble is one which I do not lightly confer upon the opposition. North of today's hand was fortunate to have been doubled by the avaricious Mr. East. Without the information gleaned from the double, declarer would have the choice of playing for the hearts to break two-two or to take two heart finesses trusting the heart honors to be divided. The latter play is on percentage the better of the two.

The double, however, warned him that the trumps were probably "banked" and he proceeded to play the hand in a very abnormal manner. The ten of clubs was opened and West's queen was captured by the king. The ace and king of spades were then cashed and the ten of spades trumped by North.

Then came the two top diamonds and the ace of clubs, upon which dummy discarded the ten of diamonds. The three of clubs was ruffed in dummy and the queen of diamonds cashed, upon which declarer discarded the jack of clubs. The last spade was then trumped by declarer with the six of hearts and the following end position developed: North held the ace-nine-seven of trumps, East the king-queen-two, and South the jack-ten-eight.

North then led the seven of hearts. East, of course, won with the queen for his first and last trick. It was now his lead and he realized that he had become the victim of his own greed.

Map Drive to Win Post-War Equality of Women in Jobs

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—Some 30 women's national organizations have agreed to campaign jointly for equitable employment of women in the post-war era.

Miss Frieda Miller, women's bureau director of the department of labor, announced today that labor, management, professional, religious, welfare, and Negro groups approved a blueprint for such employment at a conference here yesterday. The blueprint calls for inclusion of competent, informed women on state and municipal post-war planning bodies.

Miss Miller said she expects women's chances for employment to diminish the moment civilian production again predominates. Effective removal of discrimination against women rests chiefly with state legislatures and community administrations, she added.

APPLE-Y MINCE PIE FRUIT-SWEET FILLING —TAKES NO SUGAR!

Spry Piecrust: Mix 2¼ cups sifted ALL-PURPOSE FLOUR and 1 teaspoon SALT. Measure ¾ cup pure, all-vegetable SPRY and divide into two equal parts.

STEP 1 for Tenderness—cut in first half of Spry until as fine as meal. See how easily creamy Spry cuts in.

STEP 2 for Flakiness—cut in remaining Spry until size of large peas. Add 5 tablespoons cold WATER, mixing thoroughly into a dough.

1 package dry mincemeat
1½ cups apple juice or cider
2 cups chopped apples
¼ teaspoon salt
1 recipe Spry Piecrust

Combine mincemeat, apple juice, apples and salt in saucepan. Boil rapidly 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool.

Roll ⅔ of dough ⅛ inch thick and line a 9-inch pie pan. Roll remaining half of dough for top crust. To decorate and allow steam to escape—cut with small Christmas tree cutter, making 5 trees. Don't cut through dough. Tips of trees should point outwards.

BANBURY-TARTS BAKED IN A MUFFIN TIN

1 cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons grated lemon rind
¼ cup walnuts, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt

Roll dough ⅛ inch thick and cut in eight 5½-inch circles. Fit these rounds into 3-inch muffin pans, pinching into fluted rims at top. Fill with raisin mixture. Place cut-out pastry star on top of each tart. Sprinkle stars with green sugar, if desired. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 30-40 minutes. Makes 8 tarts. Such tender, sweet-tasting pastry with pure, bland, digestible Spry.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Joe Sinke, the Chicagoan who has refused to let go of the lead in the fourth annual All-Star bowling tournament, which today enters its final four day phase in the Auditorium service men's center under the sponsorship of Chicago Tribune Charities Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America, late last night found himself confronted with the toughest final field which ever has come into the world series of tenpins.

Sinke, the Chicago mail man who has resisted the attacks of the nation's sharpest marksmen since he took over the total pin lead on Sunday evening, hung on to his advantage thru the first six games of yesterday's 12 game semi-finals. He knocked over enough pins yesterday afternoon to retain his advantage with a 6,052 against the 5,993 submitted by Nelson Burton, the dapper St. Louisan who paced the field thru last year's preliminaries.

Gibson Temporary Leader.

Going into last night's vital dueling, Sinke found himself with the task of shooting a 1,212 to match the 7,264 with which Therman Gibson of Detroit's great E. and B. team has taken temporary command of the lead. Pushing Therman, stocky arc welder from the Motor City, was his teammate of the E. and B. quintet, Fred Bujack, who posted a 7,215, seven pins up on Cleveland's bald headed singer, Joe Kissoff, who fired a 7,208 for his 36 game preview stint.

In the four years of the tournament, there seldom has been a greater fight for the valued foles in the match game round robin finals, opening at noon today and continuing thru Sunday night's final block. The competition was so intense that such proven competitors as George Young, the Baldwin, N. Y., artist who won last year's special prize of $200 for pacing the field thru the prelims and semi-finals, found himself short of the 11 berths in the 16 man cast opening today.

Crimmins Handicapped.

So also did John Crimmins, one of the grittiest bowlers in the game. Altho it wasn't known to the crowd, Johnny worked with an ailing back, which caused him to undergo a treatment from an osteopath late yesterday.

Nor were the others in the field of 48 semi-finalists lax in their efforts against the job of earning a place in today's finals. Eddie Kraft of Fort Wayne came up with a 266, one shy of the 1944 tournament record, held by Frank Tarbox the Findlay [O.] Stone company left-hander, and Johnny Small of Chicago, as he went to work on the final squad, preceding Sinke's company this morning. Pvt. Joe Wilman, the former west sider who is now stationed in Fort Lewis, Wash., created the liveliest show of the night, when he assembled an opening job of five games of 204, 197, 264, 225, and 185.

The 16 finalists will battle each other in 15 four game matches. No. 16 on the schedule will be Sunday night's position round, wherein the leader for the first 15 games will meet the second high scorer, the third the fourth, the fifth the sixth, etc.

The round robin finals will be governed by the Petersen point system. Under this plan, a bowler is credited with one point for each 50 pins he knocks down and one point for each game he wins within a match. In the event of a tie game, each bowler is awarded a half a point, or the equivalent of 25 pins. A bowler also receives an additional point if he should win the lesser number of games in a match, but still outscores his opponent in total pins.

Indiana State Five Deals Charleston 2d Loss, 46-36

Post-War Plans?

Post-war plans? Why, yes, to be sure,
The fellows all have them made,
Whether they're dreamed up on barren Attu
Or down in some tropical glade;
They're probably not as pretentious
Or complex as one might feel,
As a matter of fact they're so simple
It's hard to believe that they're real.

Just to call for the girl on a Sunday night
And see the show at the Grand,
Then maybe drop in for a coke at Joe's
And listen to some juke band;
He'll be wearing, of course, that brand new suit
On which he's begun to plan,
For a new suit of civvies can mean a lot
To a khaki-tired soldier man.

Just a swing up and down the old Main street
When all the shops are alight,
The dance at the Crystal ball room
With the old crowd on Wednesday night;
One of those pies Mom always makes
In those deep-dish apple-pie pans—
Well, this'll give you a general idea
Of the average Joe's "post-war plans!"

Boyd, McDaniel, Lee Among Winners.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

A near capacity crowd of 3,500 hailed the 16 open and novice class champions of 1944 in the finals of the 14th Catholic Youth organization amateur boxing tournament in Ashland auditorium last night.

The eight open champions:
112 POUNDS—Jackie Boyd, Precious Blood.
118 POUNDS—Tony [Kim] Urabe, Holy Name Cathedral.
126 POUNDS—Joe Plummer, St. James.
135 POUNDS—Pvt. Vince Pellegrini, Fort Sheridan.
147 POUNDS—Abe Lee, Chinese Catholic Mission.
160 POUNDS—Don Philbin, St. Joseph, Summit, Ill.
175 POUNDS—Curtis McDaniel, St. Anselm.
HEAVYWEIGHT—Joe Lindsay, Holy Name of Mary.

St. Mel High school and Holy Name Cathedral tied for the team trophy and will receive duplicate prizes. St. Mel also was given a trophy for entering the greatest number of boxers in the meet—17. Paul Yee, bantamweight of the Chinese Catholic Mission, who was beaten by Urabe, received a sportsmanship award.

Boyd, 17, standard bearer of Precious Blood parish, gained a verdict over Al Sanchez of St. Rose of Lima in a hard three round contest for the open flyweight championship. A knockdown which Jackie scored in the last round was a factor in his victory. The achievement gives the lanky blond west sider his second title of the year since he won the city Golden Gloves 112 pound medal last February.

Plummer Stops Foe.

The first knockout in the open division came when Plummer stopped Charles Immormino, medical dischargee from the army engineers, in the second round for the featherweight belt. Plummer 1944 Chicago novice Golden Gloves bantamweight winner, carried too many guns for his opponent from Holy Rosary.

Lee-Sarno Bout a Thriller.

Pellegrini, veteran Golden Gloves campaigner, came thru with his first major championship by conquering Russell Turner, a rangy lightweight of St. Clara. The verdict was close. Both lads went down in the first round, Vince as the result of a long right to the head, and Turner from the impetus of his swing.

One of the most exciting fights on the lengthy program was turned in by Lee, 17 year old student at St. Rita High school, and Jimmy Sarno, rugged, aggressive welterweight from Cicero. Abe was awarded the decision after a slugging match which had the spectators cheering thruout. Philbin, Argo High school football player, won the open 160 pound title from Ted Spicer, resident of Auburn Park, in a wild swinging affair.

Third Title for McDaniel.

McDaniel added the third open championship to his collection when he stopped Jesse James in the 175 pound final. James, lanky ex-coast guardsman who was floored twice in the first round, was unable to come out for the second. Curtis previously had won middleweight titles in 1937 and 1941.

Lindsay, stocky dispatcher at a warehouse at 120th and Peoria sts., was the first boxer to successfully defend a C. Y. O. heavyweight championship, but he had to battle his hardest all the way to gain a close decision over John Matula, 1939 Chicago novice Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion.

PURDUE BEATS BUNKER HILL NAVY FIVE, 51-49

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 6 [Special].—Purdue's basketball team opened its season by defeating the Bunker Hill Naval Air station, 51 to 49, tonight.

The inexperienced Boilermaker quintet piled up a 29 to 22 lead at the half largely due to the sharp-shooting of Bill Gosewehr, freshman forward, who captured high point honors with 17.

Bunker Hill took the lead midway in the second half, 36 to 34, after which the lead changed hands four times. The Boilermakers tied the score, 49 to 49, with two minutes left to play. Charlie Haag then broke loose under the basket for the winning points.

DRAKE RELAYS SCHEDULED FOR APRIL 27 AND 28

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 6 (AP).—The 37th annual Drake relays will be held April 27 and 28, M. E. Easton, relays director, announced today.

In order that service personnel may compete within the time limit they are allowed away from their stations, the relays will be conducted under the same plan as this year. High school events will be held on Friday, and college, university, and service team competition confined to Saturday.

Radio Preview

GEORGE STRICKLER, director of the National Football league's service bureau, will be guest tonight on Arch Ward's Sports Preview, weekly WENR feature. The program will be aired from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m.

Big 9 Opens Meet Today on Schedules

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Schedules for six winter and spring sports will be drawn by Western conference coaches at the annual December meeting today and tomorrow in the Sherman hotel. In addition to these programs in swimming, track, wrestling, baseball, tennis, and golf, the directors of athletics and the football coaches also will meet. Football schedules for next fall have been drawn.

Faculty representatives, after their luncheon tomorrow with the directors at the University club, will hold their regular meeting at which time it is probable that limitations will be established for competition by men returning from service and for those unacceptable.

Football Meeting Tomorrow.

Coaches of wrestling, swimming, track, and baseball will meet this morning at 10 o'clock as will the directors. Tennis and golf coaches are scheduled to assemble tomorrow morning. Football coaches and ticket managers will meet tomorrow. The conference publicity men will gather this afternoon.

Sites and dates will be set for the indoor track championships, which probably will be awarded again to the University of Chicago; indoor wrestling, swimming, and gymnastic meets, and golf, tennis, and outdoor track.

Service Schools Represented.

Because the end of the spring term at Iowa comes early in April, it is unlikely the Hawkeyes will be represented in baseball and track. Chicago already has withdrawn from basketball and other sports because of the lack of material.

RUBIN DEFEATS WILLIE HOPPE IN CUE TOURNEY

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Arthur Rubin of Brooklyn, loser of four straight matches, turned in the big upset of the world three cushion billiard tournament tonight when he defeated Willie Hoppe of New York, defending champion, 50 to 47, in 43 innings.

The defeat knocked Hoppe out of a chance to stay in the first place tie with Jay Bozeman of Vallejo, Cal., and Cochran, who won their third straight in the afternoon's play.

Bozeman defeated Arthur Rubin of Brooklyn, 50 to 29, in 40 innings, posting a high run of five to Rubin's four. Cochran won over Joe Procita of Gloversville, N. Y., 50 to 44, in 37 innings, altho the loser had a high run of nine to Cochran's five.

In the third match Joe Chamaco of Mexico City defeated his fellow townsman, Miguel Marquez, 50 to 36, in 41 innings.

RUBIN—320 130 011 110 014 130 110

In other conference competition Wright Junior college rallied to overcome North Park's 14 to 8 half time lead, and defeated the North Park team, 40 to 23, as Jack Salkin scored nine points. The game was played on the Schurz High school floor.

Checks for $39,025.48 were mailed yesterday to Gen. Arnold, chief of the United States army air forces, who will turn over the sum to the Army Air Force Aid society, and to Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who will use the donation to defray expenses of Chicago's service men's centers.

Net Receipts Are $207,372.90.

Gross receipts from the sale of tickets, radio rights and program profits were $247,622.80. Federal taxes on paid and complimentary tickets reduced the net figure to $207,372.90.

While the capacity of Dyche stadium is only slightly more than half that of Soldiers' field, where the first nine games of the All-Star series were played, the profits this year were almost twice as great as the most successful game in the lake front stadium.

The Chicago Bears, who defeated the All-Stars, 24 to 21, in one of the most thrilling contests the competition has developed, received 20 per cent of the net proceeds—$41,474.58—according to the terms of the contract between the National Football league and Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Year's Donations Pass $785,000.

Profits of the All-Star game swell the donations of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., to Chicago and war charities in 1944 to more than $785,000. The net proceeds of the All-Star bowling tournament now in progress in the Auditorium service men's center will boost the year's contribution to $800,000. This exceeds by more than 300 per cent the best previous year in the history of Chicago Tribune Charities.

Aside from federal taxes and the percentage of the receipts that accrued to the Bears, the biggest items of expense were the housing, feeding, and transportation of the All-Stars and the preparation of the stadium for a night game.

N. U. Receives $7,500.

Rooms and meals of the players and coaches at Northwestern university cost $11,457. Electrical and carpenter labor and material amounted to $10,220. Transportation of the squad added $9,561. Compensation to players who had completed their collegiate eligibility was $4,650. Northwestern received $7,500 rental for the stadium. Uniforms, sweaters, footballs, and other equipment cost $3,881. The salaries of the coaching staff totaled $2,700. The National Football league office, which by contract gets six per cent of the net proceeds, drew $12,442. Ushers and gatemen earned $2,250. Expenses connected with the presentation of the band were $1,400.

Smaller sums were spent for medical care and supplies, laundry, and cleaning, buildings and ground expenses, entertainment of All-Star players, ticket manager and sellers prior to night of game, stationery and office supplies, banquet for newspaper men, coaches, and athletic directors.

The All-Star game has maintained its high level of competition thru the war because of the coöperation Chicago Tribune Charities has received from colleges and universities, the National Football league, and especially from the football fans of Chicagoland.

SOX AND INDIAN PILOTS WEIGH 6 PLAYER DEAL

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Jimmy Dykes and Lou Boudreau, respective managers of the White Sox and Cleveland Indians, tonight held the first major league swap talk of the minor league meetings which promise to fetch results. Jim and Lou, frequently interrupted by greeters, free agents, and shadow boxers, announced shortly before midnight they had put off further dickering till tomorrow, but revealed they are certain some deal will be effected either here or when the majors convene in New York.

Dykes said the players who are probabilities in the transaction are Bill Dietrich, Mike Tresh, and Guy Curtright of the Sox and Jim Bagby, Roy Cullenbine, and Oris Hockett of the Indians.

Six Player Deal Possible.

While Dykes and Boudreau said it was not probable the transaction would turn out to be a six player deal, each said it could be. If it is that big, it probably will be held for the news hungry scriveners on the first day of the major league convention in New York, which opens on Dec. 11.

All the players have had great seasons in the past and none has reached the age where he couldn't have many more. Observers say that some of the sextet may have lost a bit of zeal in their present employment, but that all are of the type that would be mighty refreshed by green pastures.

Recall Bagby-Boudreau Quarrels.

Bagby, who has had some open quarrels with Boudreau which have attracted considerable attention, could win in Chicago, according to Dykes, who says he thinks he understands the big right hander's eccentricities. Bagby was on a war job more than half of last season, but finished the season with four victories and five defeats for a lifetime major league record of 77 victories and 75 defeats. He broke into the majors with the Boston Red Sox in 1938, winning 15 and 11. He split the 1939 season in Boston and Little Rock. He was in Boston all of 1940 and since has been with Cleveland, having been in a six

WILDCATS HAVE ONE VETERAN ON STARTING FIVE

Open Season Saturday Against DePauw.

Three Navy V-12 trainees and two civilians will comprise the starting lineup with which Northwestern university will launch its basketball season against DePauw university in the Evanston High school gymnasium Saturday night.

Only one letter man will be in the starting lineup, Bennie Schadler, one of the better defense men in the Big Nine last year. As a sophomore, the Benton Harbor, Mich., youngster led Northwestern in scoring with 118 points.

Sharing the guard positions with Schadler will be Frank [Tiger] Wright, V-12 trainee who captained the state high school championship five at Bremerton, Wash. Wright, 6 feet 3 inches, is the tallest player on the team and the squad's best rebounder.

Two civilians rate the early season edge at the forward positions. Phil Lofgren, a member of the Wildcat freshman team two years ago, and Bud Pettit, a freshman from Shorewood High school, Milwaukee, will start at the front court positions against DePauw.

Duane Sickels and Red Clawson, who, with Schadler are the only letter men from last year's team, are both handicapped by injuries received in football. Sickels will see action in the opener, while Clawson will be side lined for several weeks due to a knee and ankle injury.

DePauw, which opened the Wildcat football season by submitting to a one sided defeat, figures to do quite a bit better on the basketball court.

Pro Statistics Are Shuffled by 2 Rookies

Despite the fact that veterans still retain their leads in the individual performance field of the National Football league, two rookies, Henry Margarita of the Chicago Bears and Bob Westfall of the Detroit Lions made their presence felt sufficiently in their final games of the season to shuffle the league's statistical standings.

Margarita, Bear back, picked up 129 yards in nine ball carrying attempts against the Card-Pitts last Sunday to bring his season total to 463 yards. This total brought him fourth place among the ground gainers. Westfall, ordinarily regarded as a plunging full back, blossomed out as a passer against Boston and completed 15 out of 30 aerials, good for 260 yards and three touchdowns. Westfall's performance only earned him 12th place in the standings, it marked his first appearance in the weekly passing statistics.

Paschal Increases Lead.

Bill Paschal of New York, the defending champion on ground gaining, increased his lead to 72 yards over Bill Grigas of the Cardinal-Pittsburgh eleven, who failed to appear for last Sunday's game with the Bears. Since Grigas and other close pursuers of Paschal have completed their season's chores, the Giant is certain of retaining his title.

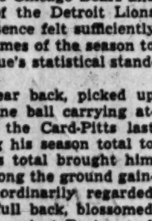
Frank Filchock stayed in first place among the passers, with the Bears' Sid Luckman in second place. Sammy Baugh, veteran Redskin pitching star, moved up to third place as the result of his 25 completions in 35 attempts against the Giants.

Younce Again Leads Punters.

Len Younce of New York regained first place among the punters, dropping Frank Sinkwich of Detroit to second, by the margin of one-tenth of a point. Younce averages 41.1 yards in 42 punts against 41 yards for Sinkwich and 40.4 for Baugh. In the punt return department Steve Van Buren, fleet Eagle rookie back, jumped from fourth to first. In 15 returns he totaled 230 yards, for an average of 15.3, the longest single effort being a 55 yard affair.

OHIO GIRL TELLS OF ENGAGEMENT TO LES HORVATH

Cleveland, O., Dec. 6 (AP).—Pretty Miss June Weinhardt of suburban Parma confirmed today her engagement to Les Horvath, Ohio State university's football star—but she confided Dan Cupid had pulled a spinner play in their plans.



June Weinhardt.

After receiving the Heisman trophy as the nation's outstanding 1944 college athlete in New York last night, Horvath remarked to newspaper men that he could not recall whether his marriage was to be "in December or June."

"We had set the date for June, after his graduation," said the 22 year old brunette Miss Weinhardt, "but it's all right with me if he has moved the date ahead."

Notre Dame to Honor Fallen Heroes Sunday

Notre Dame alumni of the Chicago metropolitan area will honor the memory of the 149 Notre Dame men who have lost their lives in action when the Notre Dame club of Chicago holds its annual communion breakfast next Sunday. More than 200 members of the Chicago alumni group are expected to attend mass in old St. Mary's church, 9th and Wabash, at 9 a. m. and to join at breakfast in the Blackstone hotel immediately after the religious services.

SOX AND INDIAN PILOTS WEIGH 6 PLAYER DEAL

Hockett, who was 31 last September, has been with the Indians for the last three full seasons. He batted .289 last season.

Cullenbine a Real Traveler.

Cullenbine is one of the real travelers of the majors. Since he broke in with Detroit in 1938 Roy has been with the Dodgers, the St. Louis Browns, the Washington Senators, the New York Giants, and the Indians. He played in five games for the Yankees in 1942. Roy was 30 years old last October.

Cullenbine hit 16 homers and drove in 80 runs for the Indians last year. Among the Sox outfielders Thurman Tucker now in the navy, was tops with 47 runs batted in, First Baseman Hal Trosky led the club with 67 RBI's.

Big Year for Dietrich.

Dietrich, with a seventh place club last season, had a bigger victory total than at any time in his entire 12 year major league career. He won 16 and lost 17.

Curtright was something of a sensation in 1943, his first with the Sox, in which he led the league for many weeks. He seemed tired last season, but in good health.

Texan Seeks Rich Horse Show Prizes

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

Clifford Mooers, owner of Pine Lake farm just outside of Houston, Tex., appears to have a decided edge on other exhibitors in the saddle division of the Chicago Horse show which will open Saturday night in the Coliseum. Mooers has entered five horses, and four of them are regarded by the experts as potential champions.

Fancy Souvenir, 7 year old cream colored gelding, is the pride of the Texan's string, and will be sent after top honors in the $10,000 five gaited stake. In the mare division, Mooers' hope is the 5 year old chestnut, Miss Highbrow.

Those who know their animals pick Edward S. Morton's Anacacho Delight from Aberdeen, Wash.; Dr. Joseph Kler's Lovely Night from New Brunswick, N. J.; Miss Virginia Smith's King of the Plains from Milwaukee, Wis., and Clarence Kimmel's Bokim from Des Moines, Ia., as the principal opposition to Fancy Souvenir.

Paul Butler, president of the Chicago Horse Show association, yesterday announced that the number of entries, 1,500, is 25 per cent higher than the original objective. The entries include all appearances of the 435 animals listed.

The show will run nine days, opening with an evening performance Saturday, and closing Sunday night, Dec. 17.

Watts-Thomas Bout on Madison Card Tomorrow

Lloyd Watts, 1943 Catholic Youth organization feather weight champion, will be given a chance to redeem himself for a technical knockout suffered in the Madison Athletic club last week when he returns to the west side arena tomorrow night for a five round bout against Lem Thomas of the Savoy A. C.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

PLEDGE MORE ARMS AND THEN PEACE SUPPLY

Industrialists Tell Their Policies.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 6.—American industry, as represented by the National Association of Manufacturers, in annual convention here, today dedicated itself to a double program:

1. With renewed zeal to step up arms production to hasten victory and reduce the loss of American lives.

2. To plan and prepare for reconversion and a post-war economy of abundance, protecting the free enterprise system against a threat of communism which might accompany a depression.

It was a big name program attended by 4,000 of the nation's leading manufacturers. Lt. Gen. Somervell, commanding the army service forces, pleaded the urgency of the stepped up military requirements, declaring that for the first time in this war there is a possibility of American lives being lost for want of supplies. War Production Board Chairman Krug advocated postponement of reconversion to meet the enlarged orders from the combat forces.

Agree with Somervell.

Speakers on the importance of post-war planning included C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors; Paul Hoffman, president of Studebaker and chairman of the committee for economic development; John M. Hancock, financier and co-author of the government's Baruch-Hancock report on reconversion; and W. P. Witherow, president of Blaw-Knox company and chairman of the NAM executive committee.

The industrialists agreed heartily with Somervell's plea, and with a similar message read to the convention from Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Forrestal, but they added that the production of arms was the sole obligation of American manufacturers today. The leaders in private enterprise contended that they must also prepare for reconversion and for peace if we are to win an objective of this war, the preservation of individual opportunities and liberties.

War Comes First.

"Our first job is to back up the war effort to the end," said Wilson, "but at the same time we must be prepared for a quick conversion when victory is ours. We must convert rapidly and efficiently if the economy of the country is to be preserved and if we are to achieve a higher standard of living than before the war. I am confident this can and will be done.

"I have faith in the future of our country and faith in our ability to meet the challenge of peace as we met the challenge of war. If the expectations and ambitions of our citizens are to be reasonably satisfied, experiments in communism and socialism in the post-war period must not be tried."

A similar theme was developed in an address by Hoffman, who heads a nation-wide movement to inspire small businesses as well as large to prepare for reconversion under the traditional American free enterprise system.

Warns of Collectivism.

"We will lose the peace," he said, "if in the post-war period there is a capitulation to collectivism. Our best protection against a drift toward collectivism is an effective functioning of our free economy.

"When we add to the war effort the problem of helping to set the stage for winning the peace, the task that lies ahead is awesome indeed—but we've got to take it on."

"I want every one who advocates planning on a national basis to stop and inquire how his plan can become effective," said Hancock. "There seem to me to be only three ways:

"First—Government can require people to carry out the master plan. That's fascism, and we are fighting a war in opposition to that idea.

"Second—For the federal government to take on the job itself. That is state socialism, and we are fighting a war in opposition to that idea.

Individual Plan Important.

"Third—Free enterprise. Free enterprise does not connote complete planning on a national level. It connotes a plan made by each individual or each business within the framework of free opportunity. The creation of this opportunity should be the scope of government planning."

Witherow insisted that the post-war planning can aid industry's war production. This was in contradiction of the philosophy adopted recently by the army and navy that reconversion publicity is impeding recruiting of munition workers.

"Postponing reconversion is O. K.," he said, "so long as we don't quit planning reconversion. One of the surest ways to keep war workers on the job is for them to know that post-war jobs are being planned for them."

An address by Rep. Sumners [D., Tex.], chairman of the house judiciary committee, urged decentralization of government as an essential to a healthful economy.

Power to Save Lives.

"In this room," he told the industrialists, "is the power to shorten the war, to save lives. I speak thru you to the millions now making war goods so well, and to those 300,000 extra workers whom you and their fellow workers need in war plants tomorrow.

"American industry and American workers must rededicate themselves, here and now, to an upsurge of production on the home front."

Foreign Trade Cabinet Post Plans Drafted

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—A detailed draft for an eleventh executive department—foreign trade—is about ready for President Roosevelt's study, preparatory to submission to congress.

Worked out by high government officials, the plan provides for a cabinet secretary to carry out the administration program for greatly expanded commerce abroad after the war. It should reach the President soon, it was learned today. Officials were optimistic that it would meet with White House approval and be sent to congress for action early in 1945.

To Continue FEA Activities.

The department would take over activities of the foreign economic administration, continuing into peace the activities of that war agency. An alternative plan is to scale down FEA activities until the end of the war and then distribute its jobs among existing departments such as commerce, state, and agriculture.

Proponents of a new department say that new international agreements will require much more economic machinery in this country than before the war. Dean Acheson, assistant secretary of state, recently disclosed a broad program for encouraging other nations to do a brisk business with the United States thru credits, breaking down trade barriers and curbing restrictive cartels.

Would Extend Trade Credit.

The proposed department would maintain the FEA's extensive trade intelligence service. Presumably, the Export-Import bank would be moved into it because one of the department's main functions would be to extend trade credits to foreign countries.

It would also be charged with obtaining and stockpiling strategic materials even after the war so that the United States could not be caught short as it was at the outset of the present war.

WAR FIRST, SAYS BRITON

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP).—A government spokesman bluntly told the house of commons today that the rebuilding of Britain's post-war export markets would have to be subordinated to fighting the war.

After both Conservative and Laborite members joined in demands that Britain "speak plainly" to the United States in spite of lend-lease, Minister of Production Oliver Lyttleton warned that "We may yet have to face battles sterner and bloodier than we have yet fought. And altho victory is certain, the time of victory is uncertain."

Must Adapt to "Shiny Coat."

Britain has set a goal for post-war exports at 50 per cent above pre-war 1938. Lyttleton expressed a conviction that this could be achieved, but he asserted it would take time and "There are occasions when our rather grand selgneur attitude will have to be adapted to suit our rather shiny coat."

"It is false to give the impression that we might now start to improve civilian standards of life and to improve exports substantially," he asserted.

Even after the defeat of Germany, he said, more than 50 per cent of Britain's total resources would be required for the war against Japan.

"We are now the world's greatest debtor," he said, "and have to get rid of the deeply ingrained mentality which grew up when we were the greatest creditor."

RAYTHEON PLANS BROADER FIELD OF OPERATIONS

Raytheon Manufacturing company hopes to extend its peace time operations into a variety of fields as a result of experience gained during the war, Laurence K. Marshall, president, said in a letter to stockholders yesterday accompanying the annual report.

Marshall mentioned marine and air navigational aids, traffic control for aircraft and railroads, frequency modulation, television and facsimile equipment and related microwave relay transmission systems, industrial high frequency heating, welding, and machine control. The significance of these prospects from the standpoint of the company's future business "is of course entirely problematical," he said.

Net income for the fiscal year ended May 31 was $2,665,719, or $10.77 a share, more than three times the preceding year's profit of $719,113, or $2.80 a share.

BYRNES, M'NUTT MOVE TO SPEED FLOW OF ARMS

War Plants Require 300,000 Workers.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 [Special].—Urgent need for 300,000 additional war workers, including 130,000 to produce heavy and small arms ammunition, was disclosed today coincident with action by War Mobilization Director Byrnes to speed output of critical munitions.

Byrnes announced appointments of several persons to assist him in a campaign to get materials from the "assembly line to the front line," and Man Power Commissioner McNutt announced a seven point program to meet labor needs.

Maj. Gen. L. D. Clay, who has been in charge of the army service forces' procurement ppogram, was borrowed by Byrnes to be his war program deputy. Fred Searles, mining engineer and former war production board official, was named to assist Clay.

Purpose Is Maximum Flow.

"The immediate purpose of this organization," Byrnes said, "is to coördinate problems of man power supply, production, and transportation to assure a maximum flow of needed munitions from the assembly line to the front line as long as may be necessary to bring about final victory."

The urgent need for increased war production is shoving reconversion plans into the background temporarily, Byrnes indicated, altho he said planning for the change-over from war to peace is not being overlooked. He announced appointment of J. B. Hutson as deputy director of the transition for agriculture and O. Max Gardner as chairman of the war mobilization and reconversion advisory board.

Hutson is president of the Commodity Credit corporation and has been with the department of agriculture for two decades. Gardner, a former governor of North Carolina, has been general counsel of the Cotton Textile institute and is a director of the Sperry corporation.

Obtains Man Power Adviser.

Byrnes acquired William Haber, who has been assistant executive director of the WMC, to advise him on man power questions and help obtain maximum utilization of labor.

McNutt said 84,000 workers are needed in the artillery and mortar ammunition programs and 46,000 for small arms ammunition output. He said 25,568 of these men and women must be recruited in the WMC's Chicago region, which includes Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin. This figure is exceeded only by the Kansas City-St. Louis region's requirement of 26,992.

McNutt said an estimated 170,000 employes are needed in other critical fields. The services are short on air borne radar, assault, transport and cargo ships, foundry items essential to tanks, and cotton duck for tents, he said. Increased battle front demands have been received for heavy artillery, trucks and tires, and the output of B-29 Super Fortresses has been reported behind schedule.

McNutt Outlines Program.

The WMC program to meet labor needs was outlined by McNutt as follows: intensive recruiting of women, intraplant transfer of workers from less essential jobs, interplant transfer of employes, interregional recruiting of labor, use of foreign labor, discouragement of labor turnover, and a ban on man power authorizations for civilian production.

Gardner said he was accepting his new task with the realization that his work would deal with "issues that affect the whole world." The board will hold its first meeting Monday.

CENT. NATIONAL PAYING 20 PCT. STOCK DIVIDEND

A 20 per cent dividend payable in stock has been approved by shareholders and directors of the Central National bank, and will be distributed immediately, C. F. Kuehnle, president, announced yesterday. The dividend increases capital and surplus to 1 million dollars.

Loew's, Inc., voted a 50 cent regular and $1.50 extra dividend for a $4 total in 1944, same as last year.

Plans Seaway Fight in Rivers Bill

BY PHILIP DODD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Debate on the proposed 421 million dollar St. Lawrence river seaway and power project was opened in the senate today by Sen. Aiken [R., Vt.] with an announcement he would introduce as an amendment to the rivers and harbors bill now being considered by the senate his bill authorizing the project.

Aiken described the St. Lawrence project as the final link in a 2,700 mile waterway reaching from the head of the Great Lakes to the ocean and charged that private power interests have blocked previous consideration of the project.

The project, which would cost the United States 277 million dollars, compared with Canada's share of 144 million, would develop the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence and provide electric power which would largely benefit Canadian industries.

Treaty Defeated in 1934.

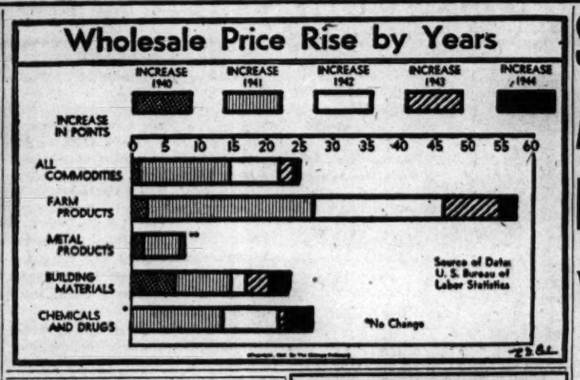
Aiken's bill would give congressional authorization to an executive agreement between the United States and Canada, signed in 1941, providing for construction of the dams, canals, and water works.

The project was submitted to the senate as a treaty in 1933 and was defeated by that body in 1934. Many senators have stated publicly that the proposal should be considered as a treaty and have described the administration's submission of the proposal in agreement form as an attempt to set a precedent for sidestepping the constitutional provision for ratification on treaties by a two-thirds vote of the senate. Agreements may be approved by a simple majority vote in both houses of congress.

Doubt Power of Senate.

Prospects of a long debate on the St. Lawrence project were foreseen as Senators Bailey [D., N. C.] and Clark [D., Mo.] voiced opposition to Aiken's assertions the senate could authorize the project as an executive agreement.

Bailey told the senate that when Aiken's bill first came to the commerce committee, of which he is chairman, he questioned the jurisdiction of that group to consider the measure. Accordingly, a subcommittee of Bailey's committee recently held hearings to determine whether the Aiken bill should be referred to the foreign affairs committee as a treaty. No decision has been reached by the commerce committee.



Ready to Place Magnesium in Civilian Hands

The magnesium industry is in a position to produce for civilian consumption without causing any disruption in the output of war materials, Edwin W. Rouse Jr., of Revere Copper and Brass, Inc., and chairman of the post-war planning committee of the Magnesium association, said yesterday.

"In winning the war it is important to take care of as many civilian requirements as possible without sacrificing military needs," he asserted. "Manufacturers of magnesium products can do double duty in taking care of both civilian and military requirements.

Rouse spoke at a meeting of the sand cast division of the Magnesium association in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Dan W. Moll of Hills-McCanna company was chairman.

War Remakes Industry.

"Before the war the production of magnesium was limited, which meant that its use also was limited," Rouse asserted. "However, the government has spent nearly half a billion dollars for war time production, thus altering the complexion of the magnesium industry.

"Things have been done that could not have been done before the war, things that were not economically feasible. The pre-war situation has been corrected, and new uses and new opportunities have been opened for magnesium, along with a lowering of the price.

Rouse said post-war development of magnesium was important to dispel many misconceptions, particularly with respect to fire hazard, corrosion, and high cost.

Scoffs at Fire Hazard.

"As a matter of fact, magnesium has no hazard whatever in consumer products," he asserted. "There is no more danger of a magnesium chair burning than there is of one made of steel.

"Advances during the war have so changed the corrosion factor that it can be said that magnesium is less corrosive than steel. Altho magnesium prices are the same or higher than for other metals per pound, the less per piece. One pound of magnesium will produce five times as many square feet of material as one pound of copper.

Rouse said magnesium should be employed after the war in all uses metals have in transportation.

WORKERS' IDEAS SAVE MILLIONS IN COST OF WAR

The war department's employe suggestion program has saved the taxpayers more than $47,793,260 since it was put into operation in June, 1943, James F. Mulcahy, chairman of the department's board on civilian awards, said at the fall conference of the National Association of Suggestion Systems yesterday in the Drake hotel.

These economies resulted from 20,069 ideas turned in by civilian stenographers, clerks, repairmen, machinists, foremen, and dozens of classes of other workers, netting the authors awards totaling $520,736, Mulcahy said.

The association reported that the suggestion systems included in its membership received 711,224 suggestions last year and paid out $4,047,324 for the 176,480 ideas adopted.

GRAIN FUTURES DIP; CORN OPTION IS LONE GAINER

Grain futures turned generally lower yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, lacking the aggressive support of earlier in the week. Shipping interests purchased an estimated 1 million bushels of corn futures early, advancing December ⅝ cent to $1.14⅛ a bushel, the highest price in more than a month. Liberal profit taking developed on the advance and a reaction followed with the close ¼ cent higher. The deferred deliveries were little affected by the strength in December and finished ¼ to ½ cent lower.

Other declines were: wheat, ⅝ to 1 cent; oats, ¼ to ⅝; rye, ⅜ to 1, and barley, 1 to 1½ cents.

Bible Company Penalized by WPB for Use of Steel

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—The WPB said today that the Stuart Bible company, Cincinnati, O., used without authorization almost 31,000 pounds of prime grade steel in manufacturing Bibles with steel covers. The company was denied priorities assistance and allotment or allocation of critical products under WPB control for two months.

Sears and Ward Report November Sales Gains

Sears, Roebuck & Co. sales in November amounted to $109,684,195, an increase of 18.6 per cent over a year ago, the company reported yesterday. Montgomery Ward & Co. sales were $74,749,381, an increase of 16 per cent over November, 1943, Ladner, he said.

STOCK MARKET BUCKS SELLING, EDGES NEAR HIGH OF SEVEN YEARS

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The stock market overcame reactionary tendencies today with the help of a last hour upturn in rails and specialties. The list was irregular thruout, but at the close gains of fractions to about a point outnumbered declines. There were backward groups, including the steels, but most losses were small.

The Associated Press rail average advanced 0.1 of a point to a new seven year peak. The 60 stock composite had a similar rise to 56.3, only 0.1 below the July top.

Gains of a point or more were registered by Pan American Airways, Johns-Manville, Alleghany preferred, and Loew's. The Pan American advance followed announcement of financing plans.

CHICAGO STOCKS MIXED.

Prices were mixed on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday in turnover of 44,000 shares. Volume leaders included Asbestos Manufacturing, which rose ¼ to a new 1944 peak of 2⅛.

BOND RISE HALTED.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The bond market ran into difficulty in trying to extend its recent substantial advance today, but had enough support to keep the main list about even. Sales shrank.

Modified Oil Pact Offered by War Group

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—The petroleum industry war council, which attacked the proposed oil treaty between the United States and Great Britain so vigorously it apparently killed its chances of senate ratification, today presented to the administration its version of what such an agreement should contain.

The council eliminated all the paragraphs and language of the original treaty that some of its members asserted might give some international authority the power to shut down oil wells in America to balance world production. J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil company, had charged the government's treaty was a step toward a super-state cartel and regimentation of the oil industry.

Treaty Remains in Committee.

The council's proposal, replete with preamble, eight articles, and sub-paragraphs, was drafted after Petroleum Administrator Ickes requested it to state its objections to the Anglo-American treaty in specific language. The treaty was drawn up Aug. 23 and sent to the senate Aug. 24. Last Saturday Sen. Connally [D., Tex.], chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, predicted it never would be ratified. No hearings have been held on it.

The council's proposal said specifically that no provision shall apply to operation of the domestic petroleum industry within either country nor prevent either government from limiting petroleum imports. The treaty made no such provisions.

Limit Commission's Powers.

The treaty provision for an international petroleum commission was concurred in, but the treaty language, which said the commission should suggest the manner in which, over a long term, the estimated demand for oil would be "satisfied by production equitably distributed among the producing countries," was eliminated.

The industry's proposal also said that none of its provisions should be construed to require a signatory government to act upon any report or suggestion made by the international commission or to require any national of the government to comply with any report or suggestion made by the commission. It provides petroleum would be available "to the nationals of all countries on a competitive basis and without discrimination based on nationality."

JOBS FOR YOUNG VET TERMED BIG INDUSTRY TASK

Industry faces a big task after the war in providing employment for the millions of men who will have no pre-war jobs to return to, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, chief of the 6th service command, said yesterday. He said half the men in the army are in this category.

Gen. Reynolds, who addressed a luncheon of the Chicago Association of Commerce in the Hotel Sherman, said the army is doing a thoro job in orienting the discharged service man, but placing him in a job is the task of other agencies and industry.

The most difficult problem in returning soldiers to civilian life is in finding a place for the man who entered the army from school, achieved a commission, and became a leader. They are "accustomed to high earnings and will not be content to start at the bottom of the

STEEL CANNOT ABSORB WAGE HIKE—RYERSON

Warns Prices Must Be Increased.

The steel industry cannot absorb wage increases and remain solvent without raising prices, Edward L. Ryerson, chairman of the board of the Inland Steel company, said yesterday. Supporting increases in steel prices, he said industry costs have been forced higher by a number of factors.

"The steel industry, as a result of its frozen price schedule, is not showing a rate of return on invested capital commensurate with that of industry generally," he said. "Some people appear to believe that the steel industry can absorb any number of wage advances without increasing prices. This is, of course, impossible if the industry is to remain solvent."

Prices Same as in 1939.

Ryerson said the industry's price schedule has not been changed since 1939, altho there have been two general wage increases and the war labor board has ordered additional upward adjustments. Tho indeterminable, it is expected that they will be substantial.

"Besides the wage increases, our costs have risen because of advances in the prices of many of the materials we purchase," he continued. "As a result, our operations show direct losses on a number of products, and this must be true in the steel industry as a whole."

Profit Below Industrial Average.

He said that a recent survey made by the National City Bank of New York showed that in the first nine months of this year, 26 iron and steel companies had earnings which reflected an annual rate of 4.9 per cent on net worth, compared with 8.9 per cent for 245 companies in various manufacturing activities.

"Surely no one can justify discrimination against one particular industry," he declared. "It would, therefore, seem clear that the steel price schedule should be properly adjusted if sufficient risk capital is to be attracted in this key industry, in order that it may be prepared to provide a high level of employment in the post-war period."

DISCLOSE SOME DETAILS OF FORD POST-WAR PLAN

New York, Dec. 6 [Special].—Henry Ford II., executive vice president, today disclosed some details of the new model car that the Ford Motor company will build after the war to sell for 15 to 20 per cent less than the regular Ford.

When the war is ended Ford will stop making airplanes and devote its entire facilities to manufacture of motor vehicles, he said. Plans are under consideration to utilize part of the huge Willow Run plant for construction of farm motor equipment, but no decision has been made.

"The kind of a car we have in mind would be a full sized automobile with all of the built-in conveniences one gets in the regular models," he said of the low priced car.

The grandson of Henry Ford said the new automobile would offer economies of more miles per gallon of gasoline and lower upkeep cost.

AMER. AIRLINES VOTES CAPITAL STOCK CHANGES

New York, Dec. 6 [Special].—Stockholders of American Airlines at a special meeting today approved a two-for-one splitup of the common stock, authorized 200,000 shares of new $100 par preferred stock, and increased authorized common stock to 2½ million shares of which 100,000 will be reserved for sale to employes.

The capital changes are intended to facilitate a contemplated post-war expansion, but no immediate financing is to be undertaken, it was said.

The 50,000 shares of no par preferred stock previously outstanding recently were called for redemption on Jan. 15, and a large number already have been converted into common shares.

CAB AID BACKS DELTA, EASTERN AIR ROUTES TO CHICAGO, DETROIT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP).—A civil aeronautics board examiner recommended today extension of routes of Eastern Air Lines and Delta Air corporation to provide additional service between the Great Lakes and Florida.

The report recommended extension of Eastern's route No. 6 from Columbia, S. C., to Detroit, Mich., via Charlotte, Winston-Salem and Greensboro, N. C., Roanoke, Va., Charleston, W. Va., and Columbus and Toledo, O. It recommended also that Delta's route No. 54 be extended to include Cincinnati and Chicago by way of Muncie-Anderson-New Castle, Ind.

The report recommended that all other applications by Eastern, Delta, and a number of other carriers to provide service in the same general area be denied.

Santa Fe Buys 10 More Large Diesel Engines

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

The Santa Fe railway has placed an order for ten 5,400 horse power diesel electric freight locomotives with the Electro-Motive division of the General Motors corporation, Fred G. Gurley, Santa Fe president, disclosed yesterday. When delivery is made the Santa Fe will have a fleet of 78 of these big locomotives—the largest fleet of such engines in the country.

The new freighters will be built at Electro-Motive's plant near La Grange which has had such an important influence in regeneration of the railroads. About 2,600 diesel electric power units have been sold by Electro-Motive. About 2,000 are in service, indicating that orders for approximately 600 units remain on the books.

Power Units Coupled.

The various railroads couple two or more power units together—to fit their needs—as single locomotives. An estimated 1,200 La Grange built diesel electric locomotives, including multiple units are in operation on 29 leading American railroads.

Altho a few large railroads continue to put their faith in steam—notably the Pennsylvania—the growing list of roads using diesel electrics indicates their rise in importance in the last decade for both freight and passenger operation where there is opportunity for maximum use of the power unit. The diesel-electric produces most on its investment when it gives near 24 hour a day service—a locomotive standing in a roundhouse produces no profits.

The diesel-electrics now consume oil as their fuel, but they could use coal if it could be converted into liquid fuel.

Termed Efficient Power Unit.

"The diesel-electric engine provides one of the most efficient methods for converting heat to power," said H. L. Hamilton, vice president of General Motors corporation and a pioneer in development of this type of locomotive.

"We now use oil, but we could redesign our engines to utilize any satisfactory liquid fuel. What the coal mine operators should do is to process coal at the source—at the mines—to give the best possible fuel. The logical move is to take the scientific approach.

"It is unlikely that Germany would still be in the war had not her scientists developed a means for converting coal into a liquid fuel satisfactory for use in internal combustion engines. The minute that economics justify the use of a fuel you may be sure the engineers will redesign the engines. The coal people have been asleep."

Tireless Service Aids War.

Santa Fe railway officials have said that had it not been for the tireless operations of the big diesel freighters they could not have handled their tough war assignments. The road has been using 52 of the 5,400 horse power freighters—280,800 horse power—on the most difficult section of its line, the 459 miles between Winslow, Ariz., and Barstow, Cal. On that run are burning desert and high mountains with steep grades.

The diesels haul 3,150 tons of freight over the mountains without a pusher, and no time is lost for watering in crossing the desert.

The Santa Fe also ordered 500 steel 50-ton auto box cars from the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company yesterday.

CATTLE RECOVER PRICE LOSSES ON CUT IN RECEIPTS

An abrupt reduction in cattle receipts from farms yesterday, the result of last week's price pressure caused partly by the government's new set-aside order which went into effect Monday, brought the market well out of the slump. Buyers bid actively for the 7,500 head received, which was the smallest Wednesday total since June, 1943.

Gains of 25 to 50 cents a hundred pounds were general in steers that were hit hardest last week, and some sales of stock in the $15 to $16 column last week gained $1.

Hog buyers balked at a 10 to 20 cent advance when receipts fell below expectations. Top loads sold early at $14.20, but closed at $14.10. The average was up 10 cents, at $14.05.

DESIGN PLANES FOR CARGO, AIR LINE AIDS URGE

Low Cost Operation Held Chief Need.

Air cargo executives of leading air lines yesterday put up to the engineers of plane manufacturers the problem of designing aircraft which would make air transportation of freight profitable. They asked for planes so efficient and economical that air lines could offer rates competitive with charges of land bound transportation.

The air line authorities spoke at the national air cargo meeting sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers in the Knickerbocker hotel.

Asks "Give Us the Tools."

"I would like to sell for American Airlines a thousand planeloads of cargo a day," said J. A. Wooten, cargo traffic manager for American. "Such a movement of traffic is not a silly dream. It is possible in the immediate foreseeable future if you will give us the tools to do the job—the proper plane.

"Design a plane that can transport phonograph records for 15 cents a ton mile and we'll load the plane down day in and day out, with or without Frank Sinatra."

[American Airlines in giving cargo rates some time ago set its lowest rate for package freight at 30 cents a ton mile, including pickup and delivery, on 100 pound shipments. The lowest planeload rate was 25 cents a ton mile on agricultural products.]

Can't Move Low Priced Items.

Wooten said that the air lines cannot move products which sell at prices which make the rates prohibitive. For example, he said it is impossible to move an item which retails at 10 cents a pound when the air freight rate is 40 cents a pound. He listed magazines, drugs, medicines, chemicals and numerous other items as falling in this category.

Wooten asked for a plane that can be placed against a platform so that loading operations can be continuous, permitting the air line to cut these surface costs at least to the level of its competitors.

A. W. French, director of cargo sales for Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., also emphasized the advantages that would result from proper planes for air freight.

Must Have Proper Plane.

"We salesmen haven't a thing in the world to sell unless we get a vehicle that has been engineered to death and to the finest points of reliability and lowest possible cost of operation," he said.

French said the air lines will have a great opportunity in developing specialty business of types particularly suitable for air transport. This would include the movement of seasonal goods, but even this business will rest on economical planes. He said the air lines cannot now hope to compete with rail and highway transportation for bulk freight.

FALLACIES

IT is a sober fact that there are people in Washington who think that America can go forward by making it difficult for Business and Industry to operate at a profit.
